County's budget sees 13 % hike

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Even though some departments' costs increased by up to 95 per cent, county council kept its overall budget hike to 13.12 per cent.

The news sounded grim as Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis announced the numbers at last Wednesday's county meeting, saving the overall increase to municipalities until the last.

Local taxpayers will contribute three times more money than the province. Upper tier government grants will put $587,958 in the coffers, but that leaves the county with $1,664,441 to raise through its levy to municipalities.

Because so much of the burden is falling on local shoulders, Davis introduced the budget by asking fellow councillors a few questions.

"Are we moving too far, too fast? Are we taking on more things this year (than we can handle)? Do we have a set of priorities for looking into these things?"

For instance, he said, council initiated the economic development study and yet no provincial funds were available. In 1989, council spent $25,635 on the study, although it had only budgeted $15,000.

"In looking at priorities we should consider a five-year viable priority list so we don't get into these problems," Davis said.

"Are we as a county trying to emulate counties with a population of 65,000 to 100,000?" he next asked. "We complain of the federal government's mismanagement, finding it difficult to go year after year booting up these deficits."

The provincial government isn't doing much better, notwithstanding Ottawa's shifting down of cost burdens. Provincial treasurer Robert Nixon has "the unmitigated gall to say he balanced the budget for the first time in 20 years. That's balderdash."

"Unconditional grants (to municipalities) are a disaster and they're not living up to their commitments, such as our chronic care unit," Davis said. "This has created political confusion and distrust. I may sound negative or cynical, but these things are a worry."

Then he came to the county's fiscal management. The budget "is palatable, but higher than I'd like."

In council and general government costs, county councillors will get more money to attend meetings. In all, $65,000 was spent last year on getting councillors to meetings and paying for their time there. This year, county will spend $77,915. Convention participation will cost $6,000, up from last year's actual costs of $5,390.

Chief administrative officer Gary McKnight also gets a raise. Last year he earned $53,688 ($41,500 was budgeted in 1989 before his recent promotion) and $7,281 in benefits. This year he earns $54,000 and $8,500 in benefits.

Another salary increase is the result of a new position being created. The county now hires a payroll clerk who earns $22,240 in salary and $4,000 in benefits. As well, professional services have been budgeted for $12,000, whereas there was no similar budget last year.

Because of increased "business", the part-time job of Land Divisions Committee secretary has been bumped to full-time. Salaries will increase to a total of $46,735 with $9,347 in benefits, compared to $32,619 and $6,038 last year.

Committee fees now account for $6,300 of the budget, up $200.

Keeping the county building functioning will cost $77,800 compared to 1989's actual costs of $60,390.

In total, the general government 1990 budget is $335,235, a six per cent increase over last year.

Discontinuation of the wolf bounty means council has an extra $2,000 to work with. However, this money will quickly be eaten up in providing environmental services.

New planner will oversee development in the county

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

As the issues facing the future of Haliburton County grow more complex, county council has decided to hire a county planner.

"I think it's great," said Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer in an interview after last Wednesday's county council meeting, when the new position was approved.

She first introduced the idea at the previous county council meeting. The consultants preparing the Economic and Strategic Development Plan suggested first that Haliburton County embark on getting an official plan—which is underway—and that a planner be hired.

"It will give us an overview of county planning and will describe areas of industrial, commercial and residential development," Puffer says. "But the hiring of the planner won't usurp official plans (already in existence.) He'll be a resource person."

This year, the county budgeted $23,000 for the planner's salary, $4,600 in benefits, $2,800 for travel and $7,750 to set up an office. Since this is for a part year, the eventual salary will be approximately $50,000, Puffer says.

Deadline for applications is April 20.

Torch may be carried to Minden

The Olympics may be coming to Minden.

Although the village is not competing with Rome to be the site of the 1996 Olympics, if Toronto wins its bid, Minden will be a winner too.

At last Wednesday's county council meeting, Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Ray Moore announced that should the Olympics come to Toronto, the competition for white water slalom races will be held at the Minden Wild Water Preserve. While applauding the announcement, county councillors immediately agreed with Moore there might be problems.

"We have a county road which might be needing some upgrading," Moore said, to which Warden Don Shortreed also added the problem of parking.

At present, parking along the Horseshoe Lake Road for spectators is limited to nearby fields and has caused many headaches in the past. If the preserve is an Olympic site, these problems will be intensified.

Council will consider major improvements to the road once the decision on the site of the Olympics is made in September.

Snowdon councillor always kept busy

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Many locals knew Jack Hills as a Snowdon Councillor who was very active in the community. But before retiring to the area, the former Executive Assistant to the Chief Coroner of Ontario had enough interesting experiences in Toronto to fill a book.

Ernest John (Jack) Hills died on Sunday, March 18 at his Kinnmount home when a massive blood clot reached his heart. He was 67.

"I'm very proud of him," says Joyce, his wife of 38 years. "He did a lot. Many people don't realize that."

The Toronto native and graduate of Scarborough Collegiate Institute worked at Osgoode Hall registering legal actions for the province when he was selected to set up a new coroner's office. "He ran it the first year himself, and ran the first set of lectures. Jack trained a lot of Ontario's coroners," Mrs. Hills says.

While living in Toronto, the Hills family spent a lot of time at a cottage along the Gull River below Moore's Falls in Lutterworth Township.

With a phone in the cottage, Mr. Hills was always on-call. "He was always there for anyone who needed him on the job," says Mrs. Hills.

The family kept the cottage for 15 years, until Mr. Hills "got this bug to buy 100 acres of bush near Kinnmount," Mrs. Hills recalls. "He just loved to be out in the bush, talking to the animals."

Twelve years ago, Mr. Hills retired early to his country home when he got diabetes. "But he never stopped working," says

Protests don't stop plans for Bat Lake lots

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

With local cottagers unable to further prove that development may harm water quality, Minden council passed a rezoning on Bat Lake on Thursday night.

At the March 8 council meeting, some members of the Bat Lake Ratepayers Association objected to Monique Yates's application to council for rezoning from rural to residential limited services, and to the county's Land Divisions Committee for severances to create four lots.

In a March 19 letter, association president Tim Koivusalo thanks cost $30,000 this year, on top of the $25,000 spent in 1989. Fighting Gypsy moths will cost $19,600, a new burden.

(It should be noted that the county is not allowed to determine net costs in its budget presentation. That is, it cannot show that while costs may increase, government grants may or may not be targeted specifically to pay for some of those costs.)

The roads department plans to spend $792,000, up from $748,000 last year.

Haliburton CAS
still needs a supervisor:reeve

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A decrease in the local caseload is a good thing, but the county's representative with the Children's Aid Society is not pleased the Haliburton office remains short-staffed.

"I have concerns that we still do not have a supervisor," Cardiff Reeve Maurice Bradley said at last Wednesday's county council meeting. Apart from the stress it places on the office's two family workers, "we're paying for that support and we're not getting it."

The county's portion of the local CAS's budget is $5,647, Bradley said, and some of that money is supposed to be paying for the supervisor's wages. Because no supervisor has been hired since Bruce Watson resigned in November, the allocation for that wage has been going into the general funds.

Between 1989 and 1988, the number of cases dealt with by the Haliburton office dropped from 46 to 24, or 47.8 per cent, Bradley said. There have been two abuse investigations and the caseload per worker per month is 15.

Bradley says that because no cases were re-opened last year, he believes "the staff does the job well the first time."

The district health unit gets an additional $11,000, for a total of $93,886.

There's a substantial increase in social and family services costs. Hyland Crest is budgeted at $412,000. Last year's budget was $290,000, with actual costs driving that up to $328,019.

Providing social assistance will cost $246,461, up from $205,751 last year. However, because of a decreased caseload, contributions to the Children's Aid Society are cut by $8,000, for a total of $52,000.

And some agencies are happier than last year. Haliburton County Home Support Services gets $3,000, an increase of $2,000 and $1,000 is being donated to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The Haliburton County Library's budget almost doubles. Book borrowers will benefit from a budget of $60,540, compared to last year's $36,000.

Some agencies will be a lot sadder though. All grants to snowmobile associations—$3,000 to the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association, $1,000 to the Paudash Trail Blazers, and $1,000 to the Dorset Snowmobile Club—have been cut. Also losing out on donations are the Haliburton County Fair Board, $500, and the Monmouth Fair Board, $500.

The Chamber of Commerce won't be very happy either. It had asked for $84,000 but council decided to cap its grant at $70,000, the same as last year's.

"The Chamber should do more to finance its own way," Davis said.

As noted elsewhere in The Echo, the county has also budgeted for a new planning department.

"It was a real struggle and no one likes to have anything taken away from them," said Warden Don Shortreed in closing. But some of the increased costs, especially those dealing with the environment, can't be avoided. "We just can't turn our backs on it. It's something that has to be addressed now."

council for granting a two-week period before voting on the rezoning "during which to augment our objections to the proposal."

However, Koivusalo regrets that little could be done. "The Ministry of the Environment, although sympathetic, was unable to recommend a policy of no development in this matter, relying instead on local (government) offices to handle small local severances and zone amendments."

"As we do not have the time or the resources to conduct a private lake capacity study at this time, we are obliged to accept the council's decision."

Still, the fight for preserving the water quality of Bat Lake isn't over, says Koivusalo.

"We will, however, actively pursue the course of minimal development and subsequent impact on Bat Lake," the letter assures council.

Sherborne seeks
new councillors

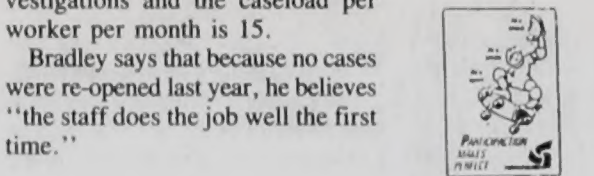

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Sherborne et al will need a new deputy-reeve now that the man presently holding that position is moving out of the area.

Deputy-reeve Ed Vallance has recently purchased a home in Huntsville and can no longer hold office. Ministry of Municipal Affairs rules say that if an election is not held to fill the seat, someone already on council must be appointed. Should that happen, council would then have to appoint someone to fill the councillor's seat.

In the 1988 elections—the next election is November 1991—there was only a race for the deputy's seat. Ben Minns ran against Vallance and lost by a vote of 161-144. All other council members were acclaimed.

Because two councillors were away, Reeve Don Shortreed said last Wednesday that no decision has been reached as to how the seat(s) will be filled.

Council doesn't bite bait Minden developer offers

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

If developer Bruce Harris was trying to bait council into addressing his concerns over stalled development along Minden's main street, he soon found council wasn't biting.

Harris offered a sarcastic apology Thursday night for previous comments disputing new building restrictions and requesting the resignations of the deputy-reeve and two Planning Advisory Committee members.

"I apologize to everyone in this community for the problems I've created by being under the stupid impression that I lived in a free country," Harris said in his second letter. "And that I could do what I wanted with property that I bought and paid for with money that I worked hard for."

Harris and about 150 others signed a petition against two development restrictions recently adopted by council. The municipality now demands that a site plan agreement be registered on title before any commercial lot can be rezoned, forcing any new property owner to abide by the site plan if the lot is sold.

Also, a new building bylaw forbids excavations without a building permit, and demands that construction begin with 60 days or the municipality will have the area back-filled at the owner's expense.

"I should have known better than to try and do anything in a town whose coat of arms bears the inscription, 'As it was, so it is, may it be,'" said Harris. "I guess this inscription pretty well sums up the fixed attitude of our town councillors who unanimously passed a Draconian law that can put me in jail for digging holes on my own property.

"I am truly sorry for spending $110,000 to create a scar on the face of Minden."

As well, Harris "apologized" for demanding the resignation of Deputy-reeve and planning committee member Bern Berry, "who is doing a fantastic job of keeping this town the way it was 150 years ago."

Another bone of contention for Harris is that two active real estate agents sit on Minden's Planning Advisory Committee. Harris previously called for the resignations of committee chairman Dean Elliott, an employee at Robert Case, and member Bill Payne, who runs a private real estate company.

"It was very naive of me to think that these outstanding citizens could ever think of personal gain in their positions on (PAC)," Harris said.

As a Minden resident who must travel to Toronto for work, Harris feels development stalls are forcing others to leave the county to make a living.

"We should all stay down on the farm and back in the bush, logging and cutting firewood for Minden's increasingly imported, well-paid government civil servants who are

Snowdon to pick new councillor

Following the recent death of Councillor Jack Hills, Snowdon Township council made a verbal agreement to swear in Mike Carpenter as a replacement during its regular meeting in April.

Carpenter is assistant manager at Haliburton Lumber, and resides in Lochlin.

He ran in the last municipal election, and came in fourth out of the five running for councillor.

County land purchase opens doors for move to Allsaw flats

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

County offices may one day move away from the corner of Newcastle and St. Germaine Streets in Minden.

Last Wednesday, county council agreed to purchase land on the Allsaw flats for use as a new site for its offices. The 4.6 acres of mixed bush will cost the county $44,500.

The land, being sold through Dale Austin Real Estate, is on Highway 121. Driving from Minden to Haliburton, it is just past Robertson Road and the riding stable, on the left hand side.

Quarters are getting cramped at the present site. As the area grows, so does the staff the county needs to hire, and the amount of paper they have to process and file. Parking is also a problem.

The new location, which is still in Minden Township, offers room for expansion and a proper parking area, says Warden Don Shortreed.

Anson, Hindon and Minden Deputy-reeve Bern Berry said he was glad the office will remain near to the County Town, Minden.

Cardiff reeve receives apology about eligibility to retain office

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

A lawyer representing the man who raised concerns about the "tenancy arrangements of (Cardiff Reeve) Maurice Bradley and his technical eligibility to retain office" has apologized.

"I wish to extend my apologies to Reeve Bradley and to Council for any confusion, inconvenience, difficulty or embarrassment that the incident may have cost," lawyer Ivan Reynolds of Lindsay says in a letter dated February 19.

An apology was also extended to Elmer Hughey, who leased Bradley some property in the township. Mr. Hughey passed away several weeks ago.

Reynolds explains the origins of the controversy. "A signed statement of Elmer Hughey dated July 5, 1989 purported to confirm no tenancy agreements. A notarial copy of that statement was sent as an enclosure. It was intended that the notarial copy be seen in the same light as a 'certified true copy.' Inadvertently, a portion of the pre-printed form was not deleted, leaving the clear impression and statement that Elmer Hughey had produced the statement to me in person. Clearly, that was not the case. The first time I saw or met Mr. Hughey was when he spoke at the council meeting."

Reynolds writes that at this August 3 meeting, Mr. Hughey produced a copy of the written lease between himself and Bradley. This "confirmed the continuing qualifications of the Reeve to retain office."

Jack Hills was 'an excellent councillor'

Mrs. Hills.

Mr. Hills was involved with the local Canadian Industrial Training Committee, on the advisory committee on unemployment in Peterborough, and served as vice-chairman for the Haliburton County Development Corporation.

He also served eight years on Snowdon Township council, which he got involved in on a dare.

"He was an excellent councillor," says Snowdon-reeve George Simmons. "He'll really be missed."

Mr. and Mrs. Hills also both delivered Meals on Wheels to Kinmount residents, looked after euchre games for Home Support and were active with St. James Anglican Church in Kinmount.

"He said he wanted to put more in because he got so much out of life," says Mrs. Hills. Just because you are retired, "you don't just sit around and stagnate. You keep busy," she says of her husband's philosophy. "That's the way he liked it."

The couple met when they both joined the same bowling league: he was working at Osgoode Hall and she was secretary to the Public Trustee of Ontario. "Jack was a championship bowler in the county, and he participated in the provincial games."

Mr. Hills was executive assistant to Ontario supervising coroner H.B. Cotnam during the 1960s when the latter feuded with Metro's chief coroner, Dr. Morton Shulman.

A life-member of both the local and international coroners' associations, Mr. Hills was a dedicated worker all his life.

"He once flew all the way over to James Bay with Cotnam to the Indian reservations, just to let the people know they were there and they were thinking about them," says Mrs. Hills.

"He used to say, 'I have the best job in the world. It's exciting and I feel I'm helping people.'"

"He worked very quietly behind the scenes, and had an interesting job. He certainly had a good deal of authority for a man with no degree. He certainly had a brain on him," she says.

Mr. Hills is survived by his wife, Joyce Lake; sons Ernest of Kinmount and Barry of Ajax; daughters Wendy Cahill of Barrie and Beverly Malloy of Zephyr; and his mother, Mary Hills of Cameron. Funeral services were held March 21 at St. James Anglican Church.

Similarities, not differences, the focus of cultural gathering

There once were two cats from Kilkenny
Each thought there was one cat too many
So they fought and they fit
And they scratched and they bit
Till excepting their nails and the tips of their tails
Instead of two cats, there weren't any.

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

THE CATS WERE PURRING Sunday afternoon in the basement of the Minden United Church. After supping on the milk of human kindness—or at least expressions of it—the 25 participants in the first Community Enrichment Forum were decidedly quite content.

And because the gathering was in reaction to previous expressions of hate and fear, there must have been a Cheshire Cat sitting atop one of the window ledges, grinning from ear to ear.

"Why are we here?" Rev. Ed Moll asks those clustered 'round the several tables. He answers his own question: "To create, maintain and discover a climate of understanding—in Minden, in Canada, in the world. What we do here is what people are trying to do all over the world."

"We want to think that what we do makes a difference. We're trying to think globally and act locally, to borrow from our environmental friends."

The afternoon began in song. Rev. Moll and Dr. Irwin Asbell joined together in Guantanamera, singing the song in Spanish while Gordon Kidd accompanied them on guitar.

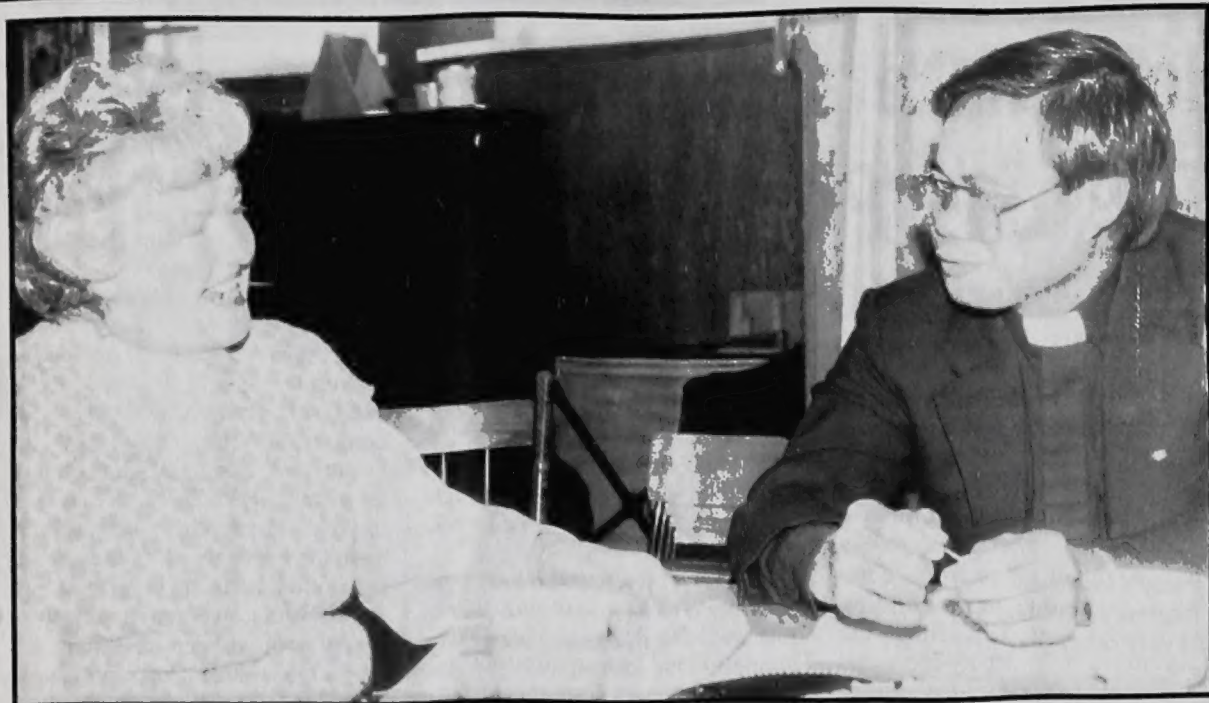

Returning to his roots music, Rev. Moll then sang Common Thread: "In a many-coloured fabric made of strands of common thread, we will rise altogether, we will rise." Limelight turned to Dr. Asbell, who sang a beautiful Hebrew love song, Erev Shel Shoshanim: "Laila yored l'at, Veruach shoshan noshva. Hava elchash lash shir bal'at, Zemer shel ahava. (Night is slowly falling, The scent of rose wafting. Come, I'll whisper you a song, a song of love.)"

A Time with Friends was Mr. Kidd's way of keeping in tune with the theme of the day: "We all share the same rights and wrongs and that's why we need our friends."

As Rev. Moll pointed out, "this afternoon disproves we're unilingual in Haliburton County," referring to county council's recent vote to make English its only official language.

But the main thrust of the afternoon was to discover similarities, not differences, between people of different cultural backgrounds.

"We're human beings first," said Rev. Moll, who admitted he grew up believing Catholics weren't Christians. "Whatever differences we have, and there are some deep religious differences, we didn't talk of these things. We talked of how we could

Mimi Carson and Father Felix Magallanes share views

At one table, Father Felix Magallanes, the Roman Catholic priest in Minden and Kimmount, began the discussion.

Five years ago, he moved here from the Philippines, a collection of islands in the Pacific which was a Spanish colony for 300 years. However, even though Spain's influence was felt, Philipinos managed to retain parts of their own endemic culture.

"We integrated but (the Spanish) didn't penetrate," says Father Magallanes. They retained their language yet adopted the religion of the conquerors. Ninety per cent of Philipinos are Roman Catholic, with the rest being Muslim or Protestant.

This background has helped him come to the conclusion "we're different but we're still one."

Jean Henderson came to Canada from England. "You become Canadian," she says, "but you carry your own background. Perhaps you have the basis of two cultures and I can't help but feel that's an advantage."

Respect of different cultures is something you learn from parents, says Mimi Carson, especially if they are immigrants. "If they adjusted well, you're proud to be a Canadian."

"As I start being absorbed into the culture, I ask 'What elements enrich me personally, enhance my participation in the community,'" says Father Magallanes. "There are parts of my culture I don't think would work here. In any culture there's weaknesses and strengths. The fact is that we are all humans."

When Mrs. Carson said how her mixed-bag of religious heritage has taught her tolerance, Rev. Moll adds "it goes beyond tolerance. Tolerance means you're living with each other but you're just not getting into each other's hair."

Instead, different cultural backgrounds are to be seen as gifts, he says. To which Mrs. Carson remarks that while watching a television interview with a Sikh about the RCMP and turbans, "after a while you didn't see the turban, you just saw the person."

"We have to stop seeing surface differences and start seeing similarities," says Mrs. Henderson.

"We look at too much the accidentals," adds Father Magallanes. "We don't look at the essentials."

"It's different if you grow up in a closed society where everyone is the same," Mrs. Henderson notes. When she was growing up, her father was responsible for finding lodgings for immigrants. Many would stay a few days at their house and so the world came to her doorstep—and living room.

"We go beyond the word tolerance," adds Father Magallanes. "It's deeper, it's basic of how I understand the person inside of me."

Father Magallanes helped people find out more of who he is by singing a few songs. The first was Philipino and said (in translation) "truth will always come out and we can be as God wants us to be."

Then, Father Magallanes did something special. He took a song which has tugged at the heartstrings of North Americans for decades—Let Me Call You Sweetheart—and turned it around. Suddenly, the song became all his own; by processing it through his own experiences, he gave the audience an entirely new, and especially beautiful, love song to discover.

That's what the afternoon was trying to say was possible in everyone's lives.

If you would like to take part in Community Enrichment, please contact Rev. Moll at the Minden United Church.

Dr. Irwin Asbell and Rev. Ed Moll sang Guantanamera in Spanish at the Community Enrichment Forum on Sunday. 'This afternoon disproves we're unilingual in Haliburton County.'

Last July 1, Rev. Moll was spreading a similar message at a counter rally to John Beattie's "whites only", neo-Nazi camp-out, just north of the village. Beattie was like one of the Kilkenny cats, hissing and scratching at everyone who wasn't from his "neighbourhood."

Out of that weekend came a commitment to beat the Beatties using the opposite approach. A couple of months ago, members of B'Nai Brith travelled to Minden to share faiths; more recently, a group of people of various faiths—Christian, Jewish, Muslim, Baha'i—began talking about how they could spread that commitment to co-operation.

"At first we were going to call ourselves the 'Cross Cultural Human Relations Public Education Forum of Haliburton County,'" but that didn't lend itself to any neat moniker, Rev. Moll said. When one woman said the group's goal was really "community enrichment", the name stuck. Sunday was the first open-invitation meeting, and by the discussions at each of the tables, seemed to be a progressive step in fostering unity.

enrich our community first... We're not alone and we need "each other."

Recent events in Canada and the world have displayed growing tensions between groups, and yet disharmony isn't new. Whether English/French, black/white, Protestant/Catholic, local/newcomer, there are always things people will find to fear about the other.

"If you are sure of who you are in your own tradition," said Rev. Moll, "there's no risk of losing it, only certain gain if you open your hearts to one another."

"This world is faceted like a diamond and wherever the light shines, it brings out rainbows. We only have to look to find the brilliance of what God intended us to be."

Thus ended Rev. Moll's fourth sermon of the day (he joked) and it was now time for people to answer a few questions: Does your family have an ethnic heritage? Can you identify them and how has it enriched your life and also has it been a source of embarrassment?

Long awaited

Just about everybody is ready for a healthy dose of spring, but no one is looking forward to warm winds and ice free lakes with greater anticipation than local retailers, who have weathered one of the most difficult winters of the past few years. Lack of snow hindered the tourist trade, and contributed to a slowdown in retail activity at a time when most businesses could least afford it. Now, with a hint of spring in the air, there is reason to be optimistic about the weeks and months to come. But there are grey clouds on the economic horizon that not even the freshest of breezes can blow away. Interest rates are high and expected to remain that way, as the Bank of Canada continues to wrestle with an inflation rate that is creeping up. Economic growth is expected to slow to about one per cent this year, from 2.9 per cent last year, and the national unemployment rate could rise to 8.5 per cent by year end. And with the GST scheduled to push the cost of everything up starting in January of next year, experts see little likelihood that the economy will improve over the short term.

While none of us has any control over the major factors that determine economic growth or slowdown, our influence over the local economy is significant. Its viability depends, in no small way, on how committed we are to support it. We may not be able to convince the government that the GST is bad for business, but we can give the local economy a fighting chance to weather a slowdown if we spend our dollars here rather than elsewhere. Local business is a key element of community life: It can no longer flourish and wither according to the seasons, but must thrive year round, for the benefit of all who want to make the Highlands their home. We all have a stake in its future, and that's worth remembering, as the long cold days of winter melt before the spring sun, and the thronging days of summer loom tantalizingly before us.

Looking ahead

Haliburton County council took two important steps forward last week when members decided to hire a county planner, and to purchase a piece of property in the Allsaw area for a new county office building. Both moves are evidence not only of the physical growth the county is experiencing, but of a growing determination of local politicians to take control of the future.

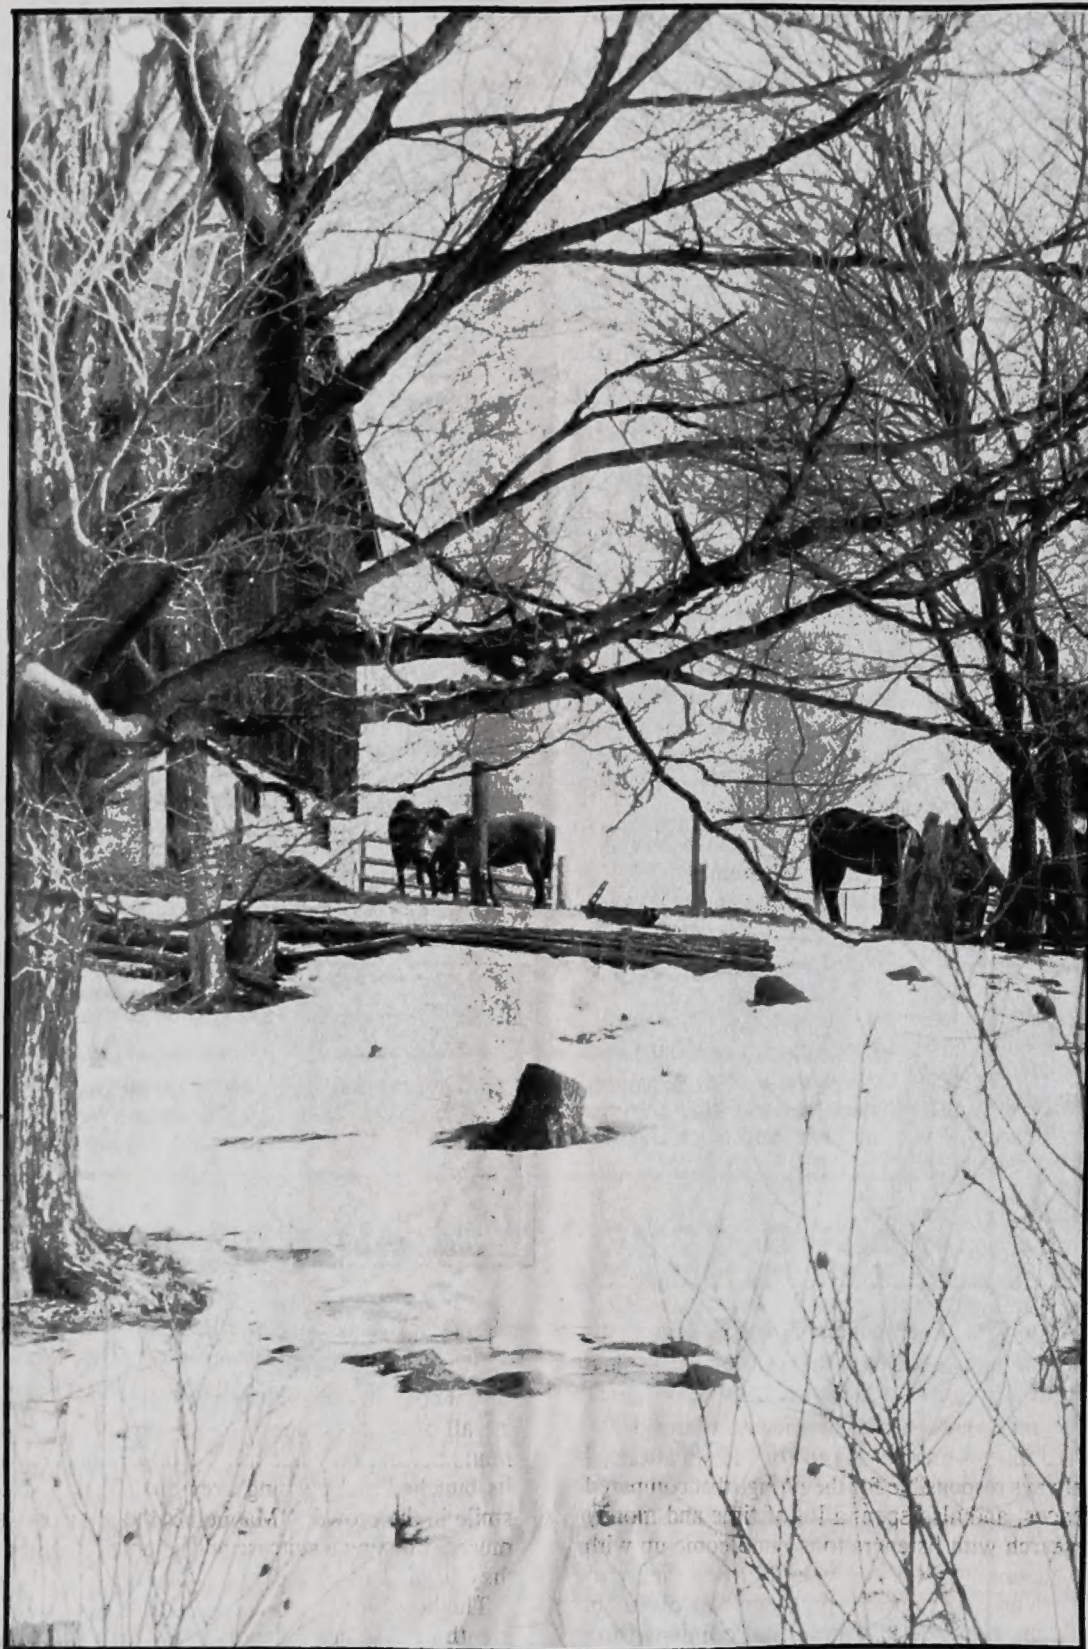

A lack of uniform and effective planning policies has been a major shortcoming of Haliburton County council for many years. Until recently, local politicians balked at any move to create and implement standard planning concepts for county as a whole. They preferred to keep the decisions in their own back yard, so to speak, with the result that what was considered inappropriate in one municipality was perfectly acceptable in another. Recently, county councillors recognized that the best way to ensure orderly growth and development in Haliburton County is through a county-wide official plan. The decision to hire a planner, though not inexpensive, will pay big dividends if it helps ensure that development is better controlled and managed than it has been up to now.

The land purchase for a new county office should also prove to be a shrewd move. The present offices are no longer adequate, yet the county building should bring a substantial amount of cash if it is sold for redevelopment. For years, local people have been joking that the best way to resolve any rivalries between Haliburton and Minden is to build shared facilities in the Allsaw flats. A new county office would certainly be a step in that direction.

Good luck

Haliburton's OMHA PeeWees appear to be headed for their second all Ontario championship in as many years. With two wins over Teeswater last weekend, they need only two more wins on the road this weekend to wrap up the series and bring home yet another championship banner to the Dysart arena.

If any local team deserves the achievement, it is the 12 members of the PeeWees. They work hard. They play with skill, finesse and determination. They remind many people of what hockey once was, and prove to just as many that it can still be played that way, with the right kind of coaching and the right kind of attitude. Best of luck to them!

Letter hit the mark on turbans

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

"Hats off" to Mr. Ed Pickard and his letter of March 21 regarding Sikh turbans as a part of the R.C.M.P. uniform.

His letter expressed my own views and feelings on this matter to a "T".

I feel as though we, as Canadians, have lost an important part of our heritage, in order to support the heritage of another country. A sad situation indeed!

In support of these views and how well they were expressed by Mr. Pickard, I have sent a photocopy of his letter to my MP. Along with this letter I included a personal note in favour of these views.

Thank you for putting into words the feelings which many Canadians possess and which our government needs to understand.

Sincerely,

Linda Nottage,
Wilberforce.

Co-operation works

To the Editor:

On behalf of Branch 129, I wish to extend a sincere thank you to yourself, the other correspondents and staff of The Echo for printing our news items last year, and for the interviews and special reports.

Out of 56 branches in District, we were among one in eight to receive a letter of excellence. Also, our bulletin came first and our book of memoirs second in District. In large part, this was made possible through the kind cooperation of your newspaper.

Once again, thank you.

Sincerely,

Mabel Brannigan,
President and P.R.O. Branch 129.

To the Editor:

I know there have been a lot of letters on the subject of prayer and Christian education in our schools, but here are some facts.

In 1962, the U.S. courts forbade the free exercise of voluntary public prayer. Verbal prayer would no longer be allowed in the nation's schools.

Here is what happened when 39-million students were ordered to stop praying in public schools in the United States. Data is U.S. government information:

Teens sexually active: Girls: pre 1962, 10 per cent, in 1987, 50 per cent; Boys: pre '62, 25 per cent, 1987, 50 per cent.

Adultery: Pre 1962, 26 per cent, 1987, 65 per cent. Unmarried couples living together: Pre '62, 4.3 per cent, 1985, 19.8 per cent.

Suicide has increased by 253 per cent since 1962 and teen suicide has increased by 44 per cent. There is one attempt every 80 seconds each day.

Drug use of children aged 12 to 17: Cocaine: 1972, 1.5 per cent; 1982 6.5 per cent. Marijuana: 1972, 14 per cent; 1982, 26.7 per cent.

The U.S. has the highest illiteracy rate among industrial nations. Before 1972, 72 out of every 1,000 students dropped out of school. In 1982, it was 799. Nearly 1-million teens drop out each school year. More than 70 million Americans adults never graduated from high school.

Before 1962, the top three problems in the schools were talking, chewing gum and making noise. In 1985, the were rape, robbery and assault.

According to the Library of Congress, there are as many as 32,000 Christian schools in America today. This represents 12.4 per cent of the total school enrollment and this 12.4 per cent is beginning to change U.S. date. From 1984 to 1988, school drop out rates and the crime rate are decreasing.

I would conclude by saying there is a total breakdown of morality. Many will say it is just a change in the world, and they are right. Without Jesus and Christian education it is a changing world and never for the better.

The future is now, pray.

You see the distress that we are in. Come let us build the walls that we may no longer be a reproach. Nehemiah 2:17.

John Mitchell,
Haliburton

ARE YOU LONESOME TONIGHT? Yes, there are a lot of lonesome people out there tonight... Are you hungry tonight? Yes, there are a lot of people out there who are hungry tonight... Are you homeless tonight? Yes, there are a lot of people who are homeless out there tonight. If we have any feelings left in us, how can we help but feel sorry for these people. In most cases we can all do something to help those who may not be as fortunate as we are by paying them a visit, making sure they get a square meal and trying to help them get back on their feet. In many countries of the world, these same problems exist—only in most cases they are ten times as bad. In many of the countries it's hard for us to help unless we do it with the dollars from our pockets and hope that the money gets to the right place where it can do some good. When you think of the thousand of people dying every day from starvation and that 17 per cent of the people around the world go to bed without anything to eat, it makes one wonder just how fortunate we are to be living here in Canada. But here we are kicking about this and complaining about that. We are never satisfied. Our problems of rising taxes, the Meech Lake Accord, or what have you seem so small when you look at the problems facing people in other countries. I think we should come to attention every time our National Anthem is played and look up at the flag and say over and over again that we are proud to be Canadians. We are living in one of the best countries in the world and I sometimes wonder if we really appreciate this fact.

The last time I was in the arena at Haliburton I was really impressed with the championship banners hanging from the rafters; banners all in a row signifying that Haliburton has been semi-finalists, finalists or champions in PeeWees, Atoms, Midget and Junior. We are still producing players of championship material who will be great hockey stars in the future.

Keith Stata, owner of the Highlands Cinema in Kinmount is one man who is making his thoughts known on the GST. When I was driving through Kinmount the other day I noticed that instead of advertising his shows on the big billboard below his theatres, he had the following in big letters. "SAY NO TO THE GST. TELL YOUR MP TO AXE THE TAX."

POINTS OF VIEW

The churches in your neighbourhood

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

I HAVE THIS DOCTOR FRIEND who jogs. He actually goes to the YMCA every day at noon and jogs for an hour around the suspended track. His wife, a bit stout with a great laugh, claims he is just like a gerbil, running around in those little circles for an hour.

Since I walk every night for an hour, and have for four years pretty well walked the same street, my wife has accused me of being a bit of a gerbil myself.

When you walk, you get to see more than when you run. I get a flavour of my neighbourhood: the family quarrels, the t.v.s casting their silver light, the smell of fish, chicken, steaks cooking and the busy coming and going of folks. It's funny, I rarely meet the same folks twice. I still don't know anyone on my track and no one speaks unless I speak first. The city is not like Haliburton.

We have learned though that some elderly people in an apartment building nearly know us and watch Josie and me start off on our walks. They sometimes ask Betty in the grocery store how we're doing if they haven't seen us lately.

I have noticed on my walk lately that I pass a whole bunch of churches. There is one large Anglican and two large United churches, a quaint Presbyterian, and the big standard Baptist church. But there is also the Christian Science Church, a large French Roman Catholic church with an elementary school attached, a missionary Apostolic Church, and a native church of the Nazarine. All of this in an hour's walk around my house.

The ones that interest me the most, however, are not these mainline centres of faith, but the unusual ones. There is the Edward Street Gospel Chapel which is enlarging its small centre. These folks are often heard teaching the Bible and preaching late on week nights while the mainline ones are dark and forbidding.

One cold February night Josie and I stopped outside the Korean Presbyterian Church to listen to the singing. That night the hymns were being carried by the women and sung in the Korean tongue. Gentle, soft, clear feminine voices in sweet harmony caught us and held us in the sub-zero temperatures on the sidewalk outside a slightly opened window. Angels couldn't sing better or with more love and praise. I was filled with envy wishing to go inside and know these saints and take part in their worship. Someone came to shut the window, but when she saw this man and his dog rapt by their melodies, she moved quietly aside, leaving the window to carry outside the longing and beauty of the Korean voices. It seemed the singing went on for an eternity. A small group gathered with me outside, listening in spite of the cold.

On another evening, as we passed the Evangelical Pentecostal Church we were caught with a sound which at first was like a rushing wind. As we drew nearer we could hear that it was a congregation of about two hundred voices praying in tongues. Tongues, or glossolalia, is praying from the heart in language that is of the heart only. The tongue is free to express the inner spirit of a person without the limitations of searching for proper words or expressions.

The prayers inside the Slovak Pentecostal Church that night were loud and full of joy and praise. The voices were mostly that of men, but everyone was praying out loud and at the same time. A group of shy teenagers hovered in the doorway and seemed embarrassed by the carrying on of their parents. I smiled to put them at ease and went around to the side of the church to listen. The praying of the Slovaks thrilled me. I understood the "alleluiahs", but more deeply understood the spirit that prevailed in their hearts and in their community.

There was pleading and sobs, praise and gratitude, joy and laughter, and persistent melodies of the heart offered to God. It was like a song lovelier than a bird's.

It dawned on me that this gathering of folks praying in tongues must be a microcosm of what God hears from the whole earth without ceasing as the earth awakens to the sun each day and moves from nation to nation. Even my little gerbil track of an hour's walk must sound like that on Sunday morning when all of those churches in a five mile radius pelt out their praise and prayers in their own unique form and language.

It wasn't that long ago that lumbering was the number one industry in Haliburton County. The photo shows a lumber camp near Haliburton in the North meets South in the Spring

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

"WHAT A CONTRAST!" Meg thought, going through the door and into a room bustling with bright colours and smiling faces. Beyond the faces, a wall of windows showed brilliant sunlight. Only hours before, they had left Toronto's airport, with its bunched and pushing grey-clad figures. Not a smile in the crowd. "Maybe it's the climate", she mused, hoisting a suitcase and joining the others as they headed for the parking lot.

The heat hit like a wall and she had to catch her breath or lose her balance. "Welcome to Texas" beamed their host as they piled into the van. All thoughts of Canada, snow and work were consciously pushed from Meg's mind as she surrendered totally to this warm break in her life's pattern. She, together with her husband and daughter were about to embark on two weeks of 'R and R' and the excitement was palpable as they drove to their in-law's house.

'The women swished about in bright colours, impeccably groomed. Everyone seemed friendly, helpful and courteous.' What a contrast to the Toronto airport.

Unlike the hills of Haliburton, here the countryside was flat, sky meeting land in a distance that shimmered with heat. Although used to the open spaces of country living, the openness of the Texas landscape was something different again. You could see for miles and miles, past cattle grazing in huge fields, past palm trees and tall growing cactus. The trees, scattered in small clumps or growing thick as any bush right to the edge of the road, were shorter, more twisted of branch than the stately pine, maple and oak they were used to seeing. The odd skiff of cloud was carried along by a brisk warm wind and when they got out of the van, the palm trees rustled pleasantly.

Within ten minutes of reaching their destination they were in the pool, bobbing on its turquoise surface like drunken sailors. It was hard to believe that only that morning Meg had helped her husband shovel snow off a neighbouring cottage roof. Her muscles had cried in protest as the two of them laboured feverishly to get the job done before packing and heading to the airport. Now the warm water assured her that any tell-tale aches and pains would be minimal. "Isn't the airplane a fantastic invention?" her husband chuckled as though reading her mind, as he swam up beside her and squirted water in her face.

After a few days, their pale skin no longer stood out in the crowd at the local grocery store. Clad in shorts and sandals, they tried to pretend they were native Texans, but their accents gave them away. Most of the people they saw in the shopping malls, restaurants and along the side of the road looked Mexican. Mexican accents were more common than the Texan one they had expected, which was understandable since Mexico was only a twenty minute drive away.

The cross-section of people was quite noticeable at every turn in the highway or tour through the small city. A rundown shack, complete with peeling paint and horse tied nearby would sit almost side-by-side with a large Spanish-style bungalow set amidst landscaped grounds and perhaps even a pool in the backyard. The men wore the occasional suit but more often open-necked shirts, cowboy hats and expensive boots were the local garb. The women swished about in bright colours, impeccably groomed. Everyone seemed friendly, helpful and courteous.

Meg tried to prepare her daughter for Mexico, pointing out that they would be visiting a border town and not the Mexico of splashy resort developments. But the raggedy old woman with her hand outstretched begging for money on the bridge as they crossed over the border, was still a shock. They found narrow streets overflowing with shops, and goods displayed in open-air stalls or impromptu displays set up by a fountain. Cars and buses vied for a place in the flow of traffic and it was every pedestrian for himself. Terrible, numbing poverty lurked down one street that would then open to beautiful homes and stores down the next. The food was spicy and hot as you wanted. When they sat down for lunch, even before they had placed their order, the waiter brought a basket of tortillas and a tangy sauce for dipping or spooning. Lunch was plentiful, cheap and delicious but they had followed their hosts' advice as to where to eat.

Bartering was the only way to buy at the market where everything from gold jewellery to lace tablecloths were offered for sale. Her daughter became quite good at it, having practiced the words 'no' and 'too much' that morning before their visit. She crowed with victory upon purchasing a necklace at less than half the original price. Yet the vendor seemed equally delighted with the transaction.

One day they visited a beach and immediately fell in love with its fine white sand and pounding surf. They made plans to come back with a picnic and make a day of it. Two days later they returned.

A few fishermen, their long poles supported upright in the surf, were their only companions. Meg and the other two stretched out on a blanket amidst the sand dunes to savour what was left of a fast-fading vacation. The hot sun and brisk salty breeze quickly gave them an appetite, and they sat munching their sandwiches and looking at the white-capped breakers rolling in.

"Imagine having this sand back in Haliburton," her husband said, marvelling at its powdery fineness. The wind never stopped blowing and in no time their blanket was almost totally covered in sand. That's when they discovered the sand made an excellent surface on its own, softly conforming to their bodies' contours and brushing off easily when they rose.

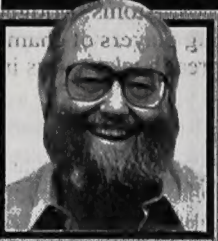

The ocean was cold by local standards but to Canadians used to northern lakes, it was just right. They whooped like kids as the Gulf of Mexico waves tossed them about and sprayed over their heads. Real swimming was impossible so they engaged in a tug-of-war with the pulling waves and its playful, salty shower. As the hands of the clock moved closer to supper time, they reluctantly packed up. The fishermen had already left. Turning back to where they had picnicked, they saw the wind had smoothed out all traces in the sand, as though they had never been there.

They left Texas after thankfully entering the air-conditioned airport. Arriving in Toronto, they felt like sheep following the other passengers through an underground tunnel that was long, grey and unfriendly. Their carry-on baggage was heavy with vacation purchases. As they struggled with these down the endless corridor that lead to customs, they wondered where the welcome signs were, some indication that the country was glad to see them. All out-of-country arrivals to the airport made this same inhospitable journey. Nearing their destination, they saw an expressionless employee pointing the way, which was by then finally marked with an obvious, curt sign.

"What a contrast," she thought. Then, realizing her own face had taken on that vacant, slightly displeased expression, she made an effort to brush it aside as they took their places in a long line, waiting for clearance. The bright colours, warmth and friendly faces left three hours earlier flashed through her mind. What a contrast.

In my opinion, this survey...

FROM TIME TO TIME, I've written about the effects of market research on our lives. It has become one of the major factors affecting what you can buy, watch or listen to.

The culprit in many cases is what is known as 'target marketing'. That is, products are designed to fill the needs of a market that research has discovered. In other cases, advertising is developed to reach an audience that is expected to buy a specific product.

The advertiser's desire to target 25-to-34-year-olds has killed hundreds of television shows that older adults enjoyed. It has turned most — but not all — of the private radio stations within earshot into either hard rock, or soft rock operations in the belief that only young people have any money to spend.

In the thirty years I worked for radio stations, I was always responsible for the ratings that compared audiences, and also spent a lot of time and money on research with listeners to try and come up with an on-the-air product that would attract them.

There are fascinating problems involved in developing methods of getting true opinions from people, and additional ones in interpreting what you learn.

I can remember after one of the first studies I commissioned in the mid-50s to evaluate the types of music people liked, we were all mystified by the high demand for 'classical music' by the women who were then at home and available in the daytime to listen to the radio.

The outfit doing the work also found this went against previously known data, and shared the costs of a follow-up study with a part of the sample audience, wherein we found that the 'classical' music example we got most was 'Stardust'.

What they now call 'oldies' or 'the music of your life', was then known to the radio business as 'standards' or 'evergreens'. We soon learned we had to use samples of real music to get proper opinions.

Plant a seed, scientifically please

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

YOU MAY RECALL that a few months back, I casually mentioned something about having a communal garden this year. The seeds are all in. Last week we got together and laid them all out on the table. It was pretty awesome. (I hate that word!).

It occurs to me now that perhaps we should have had a neutral third party make out the seed orders. Some cool-headed person who wouldn't become fuzzy-brained and enchanted by the colourful pictures of artichokes and eggplants. Someone who could resist the astonishing claims of fast-growing, cold-resistant breeds of peppers and muskmelons. Who could keep their pencil still while browsing through the myriad of bean and carrot varieties. Certainly not me or my cohort.

Edgar audibly snickered when he passed by the dining room table. We have a very large, oval table which one couldn't see for seed packets. We were trying to categorize the whole thing. So we lined up all the brassicas, the various kinds of lettuce, the root crops, the legumes. "My word, there's a lot of legumes."

That's not quite what I said upon counting ten packets of beans and four packets of peas. We shall all have to become vegetarians in order to consume this crop. Not only that, but we still haven't purchased our seed potatoes.

We looked out the window at the garden beds showing through the melting snow. Then back to the seeds on the table. And we blessed our luck at having another friend with a large field. It'll work out fine, because she was bemoaning the fact that she wouldn't be able to get up here in time to plant a garden this year.

The greenhouse is going to be put to the test as well. When we recovered from our amazement at the scope of our crop potential, we sorted the seeds into three boxes labelled: plant late, plant early, and greenhouse seedlings. Ed announced that under no circumstances would he add on another greenhouse. It's apt to be close quarters in there. And the guys are trying to devise a way to make the windows open automatically when the inside temperature threatens to cook the dainty seedlings halfway through the day while I'm away.

We plan to do this all very scientifically, of course. Everything will be planted according to the correct phases of the moon. We have two varieties of fish emulsion for nutrients, lots of good mulch, and just so we'd have all the latest natural garden theories right on hand, my friend promptly delivered two boxes full of organized Organic Gardening magazines right to my bulging bookshelves. (Personally, I think he was told to do some housecleaning.)

This sounds nuts to some of you, I suppose. But it's all in aid of knowing exactly what goes into our tummies. Or more to the point, what doesn't. Like pesticides, eradication, fertilizers, shelf extenders, wax or hormones.

I haven't signed up for any summer school classes this year. There's going to be enough to learn in my own back yard. Besides, it takes the better part of a week to pick off all those potato bugs by hand.

Title is within reach after PeeWee wins

When the Jackson Real Estate PeeWees hosted Teeswater in the first two games of the All Ontario "DD" Finals this weekend, the championship became a goal the local boys could almost taste.

Saturday afternoon, the PeeWees jumped to a one game lead as they downed the opposition 9-3. Mark Morissette had four goals and three assists, while brother Kevin and Tim Keefer each picked up a pair of goals. Mark Stamp rounded off the scoring on a pass from Andy Billings. Jonathon Bishop, Curtis Bain, Jackie Morrison and Jeff Teatro all added assists in the winning cause.

Sunday afternoon Teeswater narrowed the scoring gap but were unable to contain the offence of Haliburton.

Jonathon Bishop and Kevin Morissette each had two goals while Mark Stamp and Derek Glendinning added singles.

Peter Brohman was steady in goal, while back up netminder Brock Glendinning added verbal support from the bench. The final score was 6-3.

Haliburton now travels to Teeswater hoping to clinch the best 4 of 7 series in the next two games. Game times in Teeswater are Saturday at 4:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

If the boys are successful in their bid to capture this title, it will be the first time in Haliburton hockey history that there would be back-to-back championships, since the PeeWees also captured the all Ontario Championship last year.

Minden takes tumble as Tykes win 3 to 1

The Haliburton Junior Tykes played the Minden Junior Tykes last Tuesday, and though there might have been more tumbles and falls than goals, it was still the best hockey in town.

Two minutes into the first period Ryan Kirkpatrick opened up the scoring for Haliburton, assisted by Andrew Sacks. A few minutes later, Warren Cooper also scored for the Haliburton tykes unassisted.

The Haliburton tykes were working hard keeping the puck in Minden's end. Jeremy Mieske took advantage of a breakaway and fired a shot that the Minden netminder couldn't touch, giving the Haliburton Tykes a strong 3-0 lead at the end of the first period.

Neither team scored in the second period, though the action was end-to-end.

Haliburton's netminder Joel Cooper was kept busy stopping shots right, left and centre. Haliburton held Minden at bay till the last 43 seconds of the game when Andy Cooper scored Minden's only goal, assisted by Ben Carpenter. The Tyke forward line consisting of Alex, Ambridge, Kyle Robinson, Warren Cooper, Jeremy Mieske, Andrew Sacks and Ryan Kirkpatrick played strongly.

David Allison, Ryan Chalmers, Morgan English and Darron Kirkpatrick showed good all around defense. Joel Cooper's netminder skills kept Haliburton in the game. An excellent team effort earned Haliburton a 3-1 win.

Teeswater may have wished they'd faced a different opponent when they came to Haliburton last weekend to begin the all-Ontario PeeWee championship series. The local boys won both games, and could wrap up the title, their second in as many years, with two more wins in Teeswater this weekend.

Novices continue winning ways

They fall to Barry's Bay but coast to 7-2 victory against Bancroft Entering into their sixth tournament of the year, and having won four championships and one consolation championship, Haliburton's Nicholls Novices looked to continue their winning ways in a tournament hosted by the Bancroft District Minor Hockey Association.

Haliburton's first action came against the Barry's Bay Bruins - a first place team in their league. This game featured fast action as the Nicholls players were pushed to play their best against a strong opponent. Haliburton jumped out to a three to one lead only to see their lead disintegrate as the Bruins capitalized on mistakes and some weak goaltending. Eventually, the Bruins won out by a score of eight to four.

The second game of the tournament for the Nicholls team was against the host club—Bancroft IGA. Smarting from the early morning loss the Haliburton players wasted little time in building a three to nothing lead in the first period and went on to add three more in the second frame, coasting to a 7 to 2 victory. This game had fast tempo action similar to game one and a sound defensive game with the defence of Bobby Hebert, Jamie Johnston and Greg Schell taking care of the opposition's scoring chances and improved goaltending from Brian Mulholland.

With the victory in game two the Nicholls Novices met Robinson Haulage from Bancroft for the "B" Division Championship. The Nicholls Novices came out slowly and were subject to considerable pressure from the local Bancroft team and were fortunate to escape the first period without being scored on, as the team received goaltending they have become accustomed to in tournament play. Realizing this game was becoming a dog fight the Nicholls team found their stride and notched five unanswered goals. Final score was Haliburton 5, Robinson Haulage 1.

In playoff action, the Nicholls Novices met Ops in the pivotal game of their playoff series. With a win the Nicholls team would eliminate the Ops team and become Consolation Champions of the Tri-County League, or on a less optimistic note send the series back to Ops tied.

Practice may produce gold for women's hockey player

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

CANADA'S WOMEN'S HOCKEY TEAM might just have won the international title, but Marla MacNaull is only now pinning her hopes on bringing home the gold medal in the nationals.

In an odd quirk of timing, the Canadian national championship games are just about to be played—after the Canadian team has triumphed in the Worlds.

For the first time, a spot on the Canadian team was earned in open tryouts a few months ago. Marla, who grew up in Haliburton and now plays for the Toronto Aeros, a Senior A team, decided not to put her name in. The tryouts lasted a week, and that would have meant taking a week off school, a task much easier when you're a student. But as a first year teacher at Our Lady of the Airways school (near Pearson International, of course), such a feat would have been much harder to pull off.

Besides that, says the 24 year old, "I was not really confident I would make the team."

Instead, she concentrated on the Aeros, which after playing against five other teams in Ontario, qualified to take part in the Nationals. Today (March 28), she and her teammates fly to Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, for a few days of practices before the round-robin playoffs begin.

Marla's hockey career began at the Dysart arena. Girls aren't allowed to play on the Ontario Minor Hockey Association teams, but she was content in the Atoms and PeeWees Tri-County leagues.

"When you're 10 or 11, not much bothers you," so she doesn't regret not playing in the OMHA. At

ON THEIR TOES: Haliburton's oldtimers, including goaltender Larry Hartin and defenseman Scott LaRue, proved the better men when they faced the CHX Chickens in a benefit game at the Dysart arena on Saturday. The event, sponsored by the local Lions Club, raised $1,200 toward a refrigerated blood bank for Haliburton Hospital. The local team included three former NHL players: Walt McKechnie, Jack Valaquet, Dan Maloney.

'There have always been girls playing hockey but people just have never taken the time to notice it,' says Marla MacNaull, who's on her way to the Nationals in Lloydminster, Saskatchewan.

McMaster University, where she majored in physical education, it was satisfying enough to play there.

"It's a fun sport to play," she says of why she's stuck with the game. "It's really competitive. I like the team aspect, yet it still can be an individual sport."

The recent Worlds championship proved that. Unlike men's hockey, women's hockey players are all unique—one woman was 4'9" and weighed 90 pounds, while another weighed 180 pounds. (Six of the Aeros were in the Worlds, so Marla has great expectations of Ontario's placing in the Nationals.)

This was the first time the Worlds allowed body contact, but "I don't think it adds to the game, it takes away from it." Non-contact hockey focuses more attention on skating and playing skill.

Judging by the media attention, one would assume women's hockey was new in Canada. But reality shows 50,000 girls and women are playing today. "There have always been girls playing hockey but people just have never taken the time to notice it," says Marla.

"It's come a long way. The Worlds were covered on TSN and there are plans for women's hockey in the Commonwealth Games."

Her team is only one facet of the Aeros empire. "It's a big organization and each team has its own owner." Colin Mackenzie has been working hard for them, enticing "tons and tons of sponsors" to help fund their way to Lloydminster. Other costs are being paid for through the Canadian Hockey Association.

Marla heard about the Aeros through friends at McMaster. While she is pleased to be on the team, the thrice weekly games or practices are taking their toll. The drive to Scarborough from Brampton is one of the downsides. "It keeps me more than busy but up to this point it's been worth it."

Still, Marla says "if we win the Nationals, it might be a nice note to retire on."

YOUR 1989 INCOME TAX RETURN

WHERE CAN I GO FOR HELP WITH MY TAX RETURN?

At tax time, many people have questions about how to complete their return and what information slips to include. The first place to look for answers is the General Tax Guide that comes with your return. It gives you step-by-step instructions, and helpful tax tips. But if you still have questions, Revenue Canada offers a variety of services to help you.

WHAT KIND OF SERVICES ARE AVAILABLE?

Revenue Canada offers phone enquiry services with extended hours during the peak tax return weeks. Check the back pages in your General Guide for numbers and hours in your region. For people who require special assistance, there's a program in which volunteers, trained by Revenue Canada personnel, help those who can't leave their home. There's a special toll-free number listed in the General Guide for people with hearing disabilities, using a Telephone Device for the Deaf, and there are audio and large print guides for those who require them.

WHAT GUIDES DO I NEED?

Revenue Canada produces a variety of special guides for people with different income situations. There's an employment expenses guide, a guide for pensions and one for new Canadians, to name a few. Check the list in your General Guide. If there's one you need, contact your District Taxation Office or call the special "request for forms" number listed there.

PEOPLE WITH QUESTIONS

WHY SHOULD I FILL OUT THE GREEN FORM?

The proposed Goods & Services Tax, now before Parliament, has two main objectives: to make Canada more competitive and to improve the fairness of the tax system for all Canadians. The plan includes a new credit to offset part or all of the tax for lower or modest income households. To find out if you qualify, fill out the green form that comes with your 1989 tax package. Even if you don't have to pay income tax, it's important that you send in the green form. If you qualify for the Goods & Services Tax Credit, you could receive credit cheques every three months, starting this December 1990.

WHAT IF I HAVE QUESTIONS?

Check your General Tax Guide. It has most of the answers you'll need. If you still have questions, contact your local District Taxation Office by phone or in person, and talk to the people at Revenue Canada Taxation. They're People with Answers.

THIS WEEK

No one could steal the thunder of this troupe

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

THE STUDENTS AREN'T LAUGHING. In front of them, a "Normal" leads his "Rent a Wreck"—a.k.a. a man with Cerebral Palsy, or as the Normal calls him, "it"—by the tie. All the while singing "Puppy Chow, for a full year..."

The two disappear behind the black curtain and there is silence. No one wants to applaud anymore.

What made the moment more poignant, however, was the fact that an hour earlier, the students would have found the skit funny. But after watching Rolling Thunder's performance, they had suddenly switched allegiance. The "wreck" with Cerebral Palsy was, if not exactly their friend, then a person they now respected. Definitely not an "it".

Rolling Thunder is a troupe of five actors: Jim Crawford and Al Sunisloe, who have CP, Mark Wilson, who's a paraplegic and able-bodied Kirk Griesser and Larry Brown. Behind the scenes are Patty Whynt and Dave Coyne.

On Monday, sponsored by the Haliburton County Advocacy Resource Group, the Toronto actors put on two performances. Performances which blew away stereotypes and fostered kinship between teenagers who are all too aware of the physical self, and those who have had to go beyond defining themselves in such terms.

At first, students don't know what to expect. Previously, theatrical representations of handicaps were portrayed by able-bodied actors. Crawford, Sunisloe and Wilson are no caricatures. Their crutches, wheelchair and communication board are not props, but parts of themselves.

Not caricatures but reality

If the three had been pretending to be disabled, students probably would have laughed when Crawford comes out on stage with his awkward gait, crutches flying and slurred words. Instead, feeling emotionally awkward, the students are quiet.

Then the manipulation begins. Actually it started the moment the students walked into the gym. With the loud rock music—the decibel level which angers parents most—they were made to feel at ease, in the company of their peers.

The brilliant script and acting display how well the troupe knows its audience—the manic actions, Saturday Night Live zaniness, the oogling at the "girl with the yellow dress" at the nightclub, and revenge-of-the-mutant-teenage-nerd characters.

So it didn't take long for the students to learn it was okay to laugh. Laughter was indeed part of the therapy, and weren't the actors laughing at themselves?

In the first skit, Sunisloe and Crawford are harassed by The Normals, who lift them up, grab their crutches and generally terrorize their hapless victims.

Then comes Wilson in his wheelchair. No victim he, thanks to his handy-dandy spray—or roll-on—of 'Hands Off.' "So the next time a Normal treats you like a breathing vegetable, use 'Hands Off,'" Wilson says in his best commercial (or Brian Mulroney) voice.

Next is the television anti-hero. Nothing against telethons, but Brown becomes grand manipulator who's likely to cripple his grandmother if it could make more people send in money.

Brown's modern-day huckster is messianic as he tries to gain converts. "Bobby," he says in a voice so hyper-cool it was almost evil, "tell everyone what's wrong with you."

"Shame, embarrassment!" Bobby cries.

"We're on your side," the huckster says with shallow compassion. Bobby shares his shame—"They told me that I got big feet."

"How big?"

"Size 12... It's HORRIBLE!"

The host turns on his audience. "You can help by sending money... Give today to Bobby's children. You'll be helping someone less fortunate than yourself. It will make you feel good insiiiiide." What a snake.

Periodically, the two will return, each time with Bobby's need for financial help and social redemption growing in magnitude. "You're going to have to wear GLASSES!" Poor Bobby can't afford to buy contact lenses, so send in your money today. It gets even worse. Bobby cries out in despair "I've got to go back to school to learn a trade."

"Why?" the host asks, pointing a menacing finger at the audience. "Because THEY didn't send enough money." You insensitive, selfish morons. Hands go to the wallet.

A many layered message

This undercurrent of cutting, quick-witted and damning humour was only one of the levels the skits worked at.

There was also the politics of justice, Wilson belongs to DYI—Do It Yourself Club. "We can have everything we want. I'm talking about our rights." "Wow, you mean we have rights?" Crawford asks. "Nobody told me that."

"Of course," Wilson replies. "We're humans, aren't we?" As humans, therefore, they have the right to respect, accessibility to all, equal opportunity for employment. But instead of waiting for a benevolent society to give them those rights, they're going demand them.

And then there's de-bunking the myth of the disabled-as-angels. Crawford and Wilson are thinking of all they will achieve.

"I want a job at $500 a week, with six weeks of vacation," Crawford dreams. No, Wilson says, you've got to be more practical. Let's get the money to build ramps so people in wheelchairs can get to their jobs. Crawford accuses him of putting his own interests first. "If there's no ramp, I use the stairs," Crawford gloats.

"I think I've got it tougher than you," Wilson says to defend his position.

"Oh yea, you get to sit down all the time. Try being disabled and walking, too."

Mighty Thunder is heard

"I've got more scars," Wilson counters. "My legs are more twisted," Crawford says. When one-upmanship reaches its limits, he says "Oh, kiss my crutch." Wilson won't let him get away with that. "You couldn't even get a job changing urine bags."

The scene quickly changes to the home of The Normals (complete with happy-'50s sitcom music.) Goofy son wants to tell clean-cut father a joke he heard at school. "There's three guys in a boat—one's a Wop, one's a Chink and one's a Paki..." "Hold it right there, son," says morally outraged father. "A racist joke causes only hate and misunderstanding. You should treat everyone equally."

Novices roar back to win 3 to 2

Ops opened the scoring only to have Haliburton roar back with two goals off the stick of Greg Schell. In the second period Haliburton added to its lead with Greg Schell completing the hat trick and staking his team to a 3 to 1 lead.

With the game drawing to a close Ops managed to score once more but this was as close as they would get. Final score was Nicholls 3, Ops 2. This game marks the end of seasonal play for the Nicholls team with their next action coming Saturday, March 31 as the Nicholls players participated in the Novice H/L tourney hosted by the village of Wilberforce.

Cold may kill moth eggs

of Gypsy Moth in Ontario since 1983. On average, winter temperatures caused mortality in 36 percent of egg masses sampled above the snowline on the stems of trees. Mortality of egg masses below the snow masses, which were afforded some insulation from cold temperatures averaged 5 percent.

Other studies indicate that egg mass survival is related to exposure time and temperature. Egg mass survival declines significantly as temperatures fall below the -25 degree Celcius mark and remain there longer than one day.

In two experiments, with the temperature at -25 degrees Celcius and colder, survival was less than 80 percent after one day and 8 percent after three days.

Temperature observed at Philip Graham's weather station in Minden show that last December's temperatures were -25 degrees Celcius or colder for three days on two separate occasions. Early March also had a four day stretch of temperatures below -25 degrees.

Do-good dad then gives his son a soon-you'll-be-a-man punch. Next day: Son comes home with another joke. "How many cripples does it take to screw in a lightbulb?" Son cringes, but father doesn't say anything. "Five. Four to complain it's too much work and one to get someone else to do it."

"Ha, ha, ha," says father. "That's what I call a really good joke. Why? Because it's true."

Loud music signifies another scene change, and the three friends make their way into a nightclub. This time it's Crawford with the bravado, like the stud who's more boast than action. (Sunisloe is the quiet wise man of human nature.)

Wilson can't get up enough nerve to ask the girl in the yellow dress to dance because he's a wimp, Crawford says. Many of the male students could relate, and they didn't have to worry about being rejected because they're in a wheelchair.

"Try a real girl instead of one in a magazine," Crawford says as the ultimate insult. (The students liked that one.)

The music blares, and Wilson's facial expressions tell you he's asked, and been accepted. But she has to make a friend call first. Then why did she go to the exit? "Maybe she just had to go to her car to get that phone number," an optimistic Wilson says.

Rolling Thunder's crowning achievement, at least in dramatic impact, is the last scene. Father and son are talking about how the boys at the office really liked the joke about the cripples. "Have you ever met a cripple?" son asks. Once, when a "crippie-whippie" asked him for the time. (The cripple probably couldn't afford a watch.)

At the mall, son decides he wants to get his picture taken. But wait, in the booth. There's someone in there, and it's (indrawn breath)... a CRIPPLE!

Everything turns surreal. Actions are in slow motion—the acting is superb—and events become larger than life. There's a struggle, a chase, the son pulls Crawford's crutches. Then, watching in horror, pulls out his gun. Bang! Dad, in a moment of pure comedy, you hear "Clink."

Crawford is deflecting the bullets with his crutches! Faster than a speeding bullet, the superhero's super crutches become a secret defense. Disabled foils the abled, good triumphs over evil, and nothing can steal the thunder from this troupe.

The students are on their feet, applauding wildly. Not just because "isn't it nice these handicapped people are doing something constructive with their time?" But applauding with respect and admiration.

Rolling Thunder has won over a new bunch of converts.

All cottage associations to be asked to water levels meeting

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The following is a report in brief of some of the items discussed at last Wednesday's Haliburton County Council meeting:

Paying respect

The meeting began with a minute's silence in respect for the families of Lorne Ray and Jack Hills, who both passed away recently. Mr. Ray was the foreman of the county's Highland Grove roads yard and was very active in sports, especially hockey. "He was a real asset to this county," said Warden Don Shortreed. Mr. Hills was a Snowdon councillor who Mr. Shortreed said would be "missed by everyone he came in contact with in the county."

Water levels

Representatives from all county cottagers' associations will be asked to a public meeting to discuss water levels. The meeting follows Halls/Hawk Lakes association's proposal to limit the vertical drawdown on Big and Little Hawk Lakes and Eels Lake to seven feet. The Trent Severn Waterway has said it will consider the idea only if all other lake associations on the watershed agree.

"There will be a delegate from each lake and we'll try to resolve some of the problems they've been talking about," said Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis. The date has not been set yet.

Railway corridor

The $10,000 allocated in this year's county budget for the abandoned CNR rail corridor will be spent on removing brush on right-of-ways and crossings, and repairing fencing.

"Ten thousand dollars doesn't go very far," said Snowdon Reeve George Simmons. "With all the tax increases in the county, the corridor is on the backburner. There are more priorities to deal with."

Meanwhile, a lawyer is searching for bylaws should the county decide to turn the corridor into a road. However, Simmons said that "road" is a general term, and such a designation is simply "for the purpose of regulating."

Gypsy moth update

The mapping for which areas are to be sprayed in this spring's aerial attack on Gypsy moths in Haliburton County should be completed by now, Warden Don Shortreed reported.

Landowners interested in taking part in the county's first spray program signed up in January, and the Ministry of Natural Resources has been preparing the maps since then.

A compromise has been reached on how to notify the general public and adjacent landowners about where and when the spraying (a natural bacteria is used) will occur. The Ministry of the Environment has new rules which state any spraying—whether on a lawn or a forest—must be posted. However, in this instance, advertising in the local newspapers and putting notices in tax bills will be sufficient.

Mussel menace

Just as the Gypsy moth was a previously non-existent pest in the county, the Zebra Mussel's advance towards county boundaries is a threat which can't be ignored.

"It's something we have to consider and what the solution is, I don't know," said Warden Don Shortreed. The mussel, which was brought to the Great Lakes in the ballast of European ship, is a small aquatic creature, approximately a quarter of an inch, which congregates in great quantities around intake pipes, impeding water flow. It has no natural predators, but can be killed by chlorine.

While no mussels are in the county yet, they could easily get here attached to a boat travelling from the Great Lakes through the Trent Severn Waterway. (The Gypsy moth can travel from infested areas by attaching itself to car trailers.)

"Education and co-operation is needed," Shortreed said. "Everyone has to be aware the threat is there."

Acid rain report

A representative from the Ministry of the Environment's Dorset Research Centre will be asked to county council to give an update on acid rain.

Warden Don Shortreed said he was worried about an acid rain agreement with the United States that now seems to be in limbo. "The presentation will put us up to date on what's happening."

BUSINESS NEWS

Epsilon sees a satellite dish on every lawn in the county

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

WITH THE RECENT MOVE to Minden's new Heritage Plaza, Archie Dobbins is expecting bigger and better things out of his Epsilon Satellite business.

A former freelance technician in Mississauga, Dobbins started Epsilon five years ago, working out of his house (the famed 'dome home' on Highway 121, between Minden and Haliburton), "when things were at their worst," he says.

"At that time, scrambling and descrambling became an issue in the satellite business," he says. Fed up with satellite-owners getting their stations for free, some broadcasters began scrambling to secure their signals, forcing people to subscribe. "It actually makes the channels a better quality," says Dobbins.

Those who don't want to subscribe can still get access to well over 100 channels (and up to 200, with the right view) through a satellite system. "Virtually everybody that's anybody has a feed on satellite," says Dobbins. "There's such a wealth of choice out there that you could never get bored."

Along with the major networks in the United States, satellite-owners can watch about 1,600 first-run movies each month, 2,000 sporting events, other specialty channels, "and countless FM radio stations for the true audiophile," Dobbins says.

"The nature of the business is to subscribe to certain channels, but there is so much excellent programming for free that you really don't have to."

Epsilon has expanded over the years from strictly offering satellites and off-air equipment, to selling security systems, audio and video entertainment centres, "and all the little toys that go with them," says Dobbins, who tries to stock only the best names.

"Being this far from service, quality is of the utmost importance," he realizes. "People with satellite systems tend to be a bit fussier, so we have to have a certain set of standards to maintain."

Dobbins and his staff constantly research the market for trends. Professionalism is the key, he insists. "All our employees are professionals. They know what's happening and stay abreast of what's going on in the business. We want to be the best out there."

Sales representative Martyn Mavor looks after the downtown store, while Dobbins and three other full-time staff members run the service end at the Allsaw office. "I work at the bench, and make sure it's done right," he says. Wife Marilyn does the paper-work, and all records are computerized for better service.

Clientele is split 50-50. Half are residents, mostly middle-aged or retired. "But by far the most impulsive customers are the cottagers," says Dobbins, who tries to ensure that weekend residents get special treatment.

"I've gone all the way to the back end of Redstone Lake, late at night in a blinding snow-storm because a descrambler wasn't working. We definitely go out of our way for cottagers. They make this county thrive."

As well, says Dobbins, pensioners don't have to pay for service calls. "We don't care where they are, or how much money they have—that's our contribution to the seniors in this county."

Prices start at about $2,000 for a used satellite system, but most new systems sell for between $4,000 and $5,000. A system with all the frills cost $22,000. "These are invariably sold to cottagers."

"Cottagers don't necessarily want to escape by bird-watching. They want to enter a never-never land of fantasy and fun, whether they achieve this by boating on the lake or sitting in front of the t.v."

Dobbins says not all cottagers find relaxation by 'roughing it' in a hut. "A cottage is a retreat. If they spend a lot of money on a cottage, they want all the furnishings."

"This county seems to attract a high calibre of cottager. They expect excellence, and we intend to give them excellence."

There are numbers of services available at Epsilon. "Small businesses must be adaptable in order to survive. And we can give just as good service as in the city, but we're more personalized." Epsilon also offers in-house financing.

More than half of Dobbins' business is based on referrals. Epsilon has done installations in Huntsville, Toronto, Orillia, Newmarket, and Stouffville.

"We also do a lot of business around the county, but not near enough," Dobbins says. "Very few have satellite systems. Every time you pass a home with a television antennae, there's a t.v. with only a few channels. Sometimes people settle for some pretty unwatchable programming."

Abortion not necessarily traumatic

MORE LETTERS

To the Editor:

Re: Research on Abortion Data.

Opponents of abortion profess deep concern for the health, both physical and psychological, of women undergoing this procedure. In fact government statistics clearly show legal abortion to be safer than giving birth. Data compiled by the National Centre for Health Statistics (U.S.A.) indicate that abortion was eleven times less likely than childbirth to lead to a woman's death. Researchers at the Centre For Disease Control (U.S.A.) reported in 1982 that women undergoing abortions are 100 times less likely to have complications requiring major abdominal surgery than women bearing children.

At John Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health an indepth study of 334 urban teenagers who had been divided into three groups: those who had abortions; those who did not become pregnant; and those who gave birth to children. It came up with the following data. After following the three groups for three years and after repeated testing and interviews, these investigations stated:

Those who chose abortion were less likely to undergo adverse psychological episodes than either of the other two groups. Finally they conclude by stating that not only is abortion a medically safe procedure but we now know that it is also psychologically safe.

This writer has quoted almost verbatim from an article published in the prestigious scientific periodical, The Scientific American in the April 1990 issue.

Play is enjoyed

To the Editor:

I just came home from a play presentation in Wilberforce. It was about an Indian myth or legend. The show was called The princess, the dragon and the snowflake. The group was from Toronto I think. There was a young lady and man who did all the acting. The man was very loud. Sometimes you had to use your imagination. Like for the snowflake. The man did some juggling but I am not sure what it had to do with the show.

The Indian chief wants his young daughter married. She leaves the tribe to go to Sacred Mountain. Her brothers are to be there. On her adventure she finds a frog, a raven, a dragon and has to swim. When she finds the dragon all her problems are solved.

ed. She takes one of the dragon horns back with her. Now she is free.

It took the man six weeks to write the play and get his act together. A waitress did the canvas painting background. It was really good. I never heard what the group's name was because people were talking.

Don't tax bereaved

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Victoria-Haliburton MP Bill Scott.

Dear Mr. Scott:

For years we have been paying federal sales tax on caskets, paper products, vehicles, etc. and I am writing to express my concerns and those of thousands of my colleagues in funeral service regarding Finance Minister Michael Wilson's proposed Goods and Services Tax and the dramatic impact it will have on the bereaved citizens of Canada.

A delegation from the Funeral Service Association of Canada was invited to address the Standing Committee on Finance last October. They addressed the particular concerns most evident to those in our profession who are dealing on a day-to-day basis with the bereaved and their feelings. Funeral directors per se have been most sympathetic to the needs of society.

This high-tech society has grown cold and aloof to many of our seniors, and the final indignity must seem to be a cruel government tax imposed on the cost of having their loved one taken away from them. This has to be devastating. We submit that funeralization is a necessary service, a continuum of the health care segment, and therefore should be exempt from this tax.

I urge you to address the situation in caucus and render compassion to those who mourn.

Yours sincerely,

Gordon A. Monk,

To the Editor:

We would like to express our thanks and appreciation for the very informative article you ran on March 7 about our son and his handicap called autism. It was a very gentle, loving and carefully written report that truly described our son in an accurate, caring manner. This was a true benefit to both ourselves, our son and the community by spreading awareness of Andrew's condition. You are also to be commended for the time you spent with us getting the information correct and complete.

We owe a lot to the wonderful workers and therapists who have helped Andrew in the past and have guided him to the point where he is today. Thanks again for the this truly educational article.

Reading people's minds not foolproof

and forget trying to describe the type of music with words.

Twenty years ago, when there were half as many radio stations in Toronto and twice as much variety, I used to have fun at social events. I'd meet someone, and after talking a bit about what they did for a living, where they came from and so on, I could find out what kind of educational background they had. You could usually guess an age within a few years.

With not much more to go on, nine times out of ten I could successfully tell them which radio station they listen to most. You could get fooled once in a while, but I had spent so much time analyzing such data that I had a handle on most people's choice of station.

This business of trying to read people's minds, frame questions that extracted honest answers from the people who answered them, and then correctly interpret those results all came flooding back to me when I got my hands on a copy of a book called 'The First Really Important Survey of American Habits'.

Who could forget the years of discussion in Ann Lander's columns concerning whether the toilet paper should unwind over or under the top of the roll? It has spilled over into cocktail party discussions and family gatherings, and of course no one can agree on a correct answer.

But two researchers who were fascinated by this kind of 'personal trivia' decided they could find out about this sort of thing by piggy-backing questions of a 'less than life threatening' nature onto their market research studies for clients.

In this case, they found out that 68 percent of respondents liked it to come over the top, 32 percent let it run down the wall behind the roller. Being researchers, they broke the data all down and charted it by sex and age.

And because they had it all in the computer as part of a bigger survey, they were able to sort out the fact that 60 percent of those who liked it over the top made over $50,000 a year, while 73 percent of those who earned less than $20,000 a year liked it coming down the back!

Poretz and Sinrod, who say their study of a 22,000-person sample represents 89 percent of the population, don't think this proves anything, but it led them to sprinkle some 500 questions more among four separate national surveys, and from this they charted over 100 of the more definitive ones in their book.

A quick scan of their charts shows such things as the number of men who wear pyjamas (59 percent) compared to women (79 percent). Or what percentage eat their corn on the cob around and around (80 percent) rather than from end to end (20 percent).

I find I'm on the short end of this one, as well as those who like their steaks well done (15 percent). But I'm with the majority when it comes to the 83 percent who can't whistle by inserting fingers between their lips, and the 88 percent who usually replace the toilet paper roll if they're the one who empties it...

Of course, all this sort of data is based on averages, and I always try not to forget about the researcher who was said to have drowned in water that was — on average — only one foot deep!

Celebrating history with song:

125 years of 'worship and witness' at St. George's Anglican Church remembered with music

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IN PAYING HOMAGE to the past, St. George's Anglican Church firmly cemented its place in Haliburton's present and future.

Sunday night's "Musical Celebration" of St. George's 125 years in Haliburton demonstrated why the church has been such an integral part of a village in the making. A church is more than just a building, and the people associated with St. George's showed yet again, by their faith and talents, that 125 more years of "worship and witness" are welcome by the community.

"Music is a fair and glorious gift of God," and thus it was appropriate to use this gift to herald the church's anniversary, said organist and choir director Bill Gliddon, who organized the evening. It began by Earl Cooper piping in the choir and Rev. John Phillips.

For those of the audience of approximately 300 who hadn't been on Leo Dobrzensky's Heritage Walks, Mr. Gliddon first recounted the history of St. George's.

In the beginning

In the autumn of 1864, when local men began working on the little log church, the community was in its infancy. Most early settlers were British, so it seemed apropos to name the Church of England St. George's, in honour of England's patron saint.

"Even in this remote corner of Ontario, the flag, law and order, and the monarchy were held in deepest respect," said Mr. Gliddon. So when the choir opened with a pomp-and-circumstance, three-verse version of God Save the Queen, "think not only of our present gracious sovereign, but also to the defender of the faith, supreme monarch of the British Empire, Queen Victoria," who was in the throne when Haliburton's first church was built.

The church was supposed to be dedicated Christmas of 1864, but severe December storms delayed Rev. Richard Sanders' arrival. Bishop John Strachan didn't know that with the bad weather and drifting snow, Rev. Sanders would need a couple of weeks to reach his destination. Finally, on "a cold and stormy New Year's day in 1865", 42 worshippers heralded the opening of the church with him.

Organist at the time was Dr. Jonathan Peake, who knew only two tunes on his accordion-cum-organ. Words to other hymns had to be molded to the tunes of Men of Harlech and Evening Hymn, which the choir sang to perfection.

By 1870, the congregation had outgrown its tiny cabin and Rev. G.C. Mackenzie, rector, oversaw the construction of a larger church. "He was so loved and respected, that every family in Haliburton was represented at his departure" a few years later, said Mr. Gliddon.

group of youngsters which meets weekly at St. George's. As part of the presentation, Jennie-Nicole Phillips sang a solo, demonstrating she might one day steal a little of her father's musical limelight.

Less exuberant but just as lovely were Barb Fawcett and Glenda Burk's renderings of I Look to My Shepherd and Hymn Medley, "intimate responses to Christian ways and timeless truths," Mrs. Fawcett said.

The choir renewed its fine reputation with the next three songs: More Love, In My Weakness, Shout For Joy. Mr. Gliddon took full advantage of the choir's range of voices to bring out in them hymns of pure harmony.

It's surprising the Legion is still firmly rooted in the ground after the entire audience's rousing verses of Onward Christian Soldiers. There was enough zeal to march the auditorium to Wilberforce.

All turned quiet and restful when Rev. Phillips, accompanied by Mr. Gliddon, provided his celebration in song. His first, a version of Psalm 51, was a heartfelt plea to "have mercy on me, oh God, according to thy steadfast love."

If Rev. Phillips made the audience reflective, then Mr. Gliddon and Wayne Cooper made people laugh inside. Their joyful, playful duet of Three Waltzes by Johannes Brahms, and then Brahms' Hungarian Dance No. 18 were displays of true mastery of the piano. No Concert Series performer using the grand piano could have outshone these two, who added to their list of accomplishments with Worlds Apart, a touching song from the musical, Huckleberry Finn.

This light-hearted tone was maintained by the choir, who closed with Gaelic Rhapsody and a medley from Fiddler on the Roof. Violinist Ann Varty joined them in the latter collection of favourite songs, although many audience members wished they could have heard more of her talents.

With so much goodwill and so many good feelings present in the auditorium, by the time it came for everyone to sing Let There Be Peace On Earth, this too was from the heart. And a perfect challenge for St. George's in the next 125 years.

Ann Varty fiddles (not) on the roof

It took Sonny Cook a year to realize that the Rev. Mackenzie carved on the pulpit was the same Rev. Mackenzie, her great-grandfather.

On Saturday, the choir member made a presentation to the priest who has overseen the latest addition to the church, Rev. Phillips. She explained that her great-grandmother's father, Bishop Boomer, sent them up here. After growing up in Jamaica, the climate change was difficult on Great-grandmother Mackenzie, who coped admirably.

"They came up here in a sleigh from Port Hope, with two children and wrapped up in blankets," said Ms. Cook.

Her gift, from the remaining grandchildren, was a photograph of Rev. Mackenzie. "My great-grandmother said 'Although it's not flattering, it's a good likeness.'"

Norma Suggitt, who lives with her husband Cliff in their lovely home on the second concession of Somerville, enjoys watching the wild life around their area. One evening their dog came running in from the bush doing double time and right behind him the "biggest wolf" Norma had ever seen. When the dog was let into the house, the wolf went back into his own territory. Norma said they also have bear and deer come to visit and all kinds of birds. She particularly like watching some flying squirrels coming for a meal at the bird feeders.

Sympathy to Ella Giffen, all the family and friends of Ella's mother who passed away in Toronto on Tuesday, March 13.

A recent column on a wedding anniversary of a Norland couple listed visitors and callers, among them being a son Richard Chamberlain and his wife Catrina. In actual fact it should have stated Richard Chamberlain and his girlfriend Catrina Guioito. Sorry about that folks!

The Seniors games will be starting up May 8 and registration forms should be ready for April 1. There will be further notices in future columns.

On Tuesday, March 13 a special celebration took place at a home back on the Bobcaygeon Road. That was the day Dora Schell celebrated her eighty-second birthday. This grand lady, many years ago, married a widower with two children whom she raised with the subsequent fifteen children of the marriage. Among the many family and friends who visited for the day there was Nora Toole of Coboconk, cousin Gordon Cavanaugh, Helen Byne of Kimmount who made a lovely, large birthday cake, Elloy McConnell, Joan Downer and others too numerous to mention. Some of the visitors had their own plans which included taking Mrs. Schell out that evening for a birthday dinner. Happy belated birthday to you Dora, from all of us.

Winner of the Norland Volunteer Firefighters hockey pool for Saturday, March 17 was Troy Bryant of Norland.

Good to hear John LeCraw is back at his Norland home and coming along nicely following surgery.

Firemen were called to the Norland dumpsite Saturday morning March 17 to extinguish a fire.

Gus and Nina Boyd are a welcome addition to the bowling league. During the games Elizabeth Fryer, who celebrated her eightieth birthday the next day, March 22, was feted with lovely birthday cupcakes presented with a pretty necklace. Happy birthday Elizabeth! She told the bowlers that eighty years ago on that date it was so hot in the fields that the horses worked up into a lather.

Norland and Area Seniors are planning another bus trip and are hoping for a much better turnout this time. Meet at Norland grocery store parking lot 5 p.m. go to Coboconk Legion for dinner about 5:30 p.m., thence to Lindsay's Academy Theatre for the "A Breath of Scotland Variety Show". Should be a terrific evening. For further information call George Crisp at 454-1580.

this week to the family and friends of Thomas John Jones of Kirkfield who died at Soldiers Memorial Hospital on March 16.

A good friend, Ernest John (Jack) Hills of Kimmount died suddenly on March 18 at his home. He was retired as Executive Assistant to the Chief Coroner of Ontario and a Snowdon councillor. Sympathy to all his family and many friends. He will be sorely missed.

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

OUR TANS ARE FADED, and our stories on how we spent our March Break are becoming less interesting. We'll have to wait again until next year.

One March Break that was not average — going to Florida or staying home — was the French Club's trip to Paris and the Riviera. Jeff Stamp told me all the highlights. I asked him how it compared or how it was different from any of his past March Breaks.

"On past holidays I didn't expect very much, but this trip I did, and it lived up to all my expectations," Jeff said.

I asked him what he liked best. "The trip was great from start to finish. I liked the culture and being around the French people. One night we walked the streets of Paris until two a.m."

Another highlight was watching the Folies

Bergere, which is like a Las Vegas show. Past Folies show girls originated the can-can. "It was very lavish, quite a spectacle. Most of the show was nude. This was quite shocking at first, but the French have a totally different outlook on nudity. It's an open thing!" exclaimed Jeff.

They were fortunate enough that the weather was good. The flowers were blooming and the trees were green. The kind of weather when you wear a light jacket. They had one overcast day. The Riviera was warm and you were able to wear shorts and t-shirts. The Riviera beaches weren't quite what they expected. They were all rock, smooth rocks from the tide, the water was very blue and cleaner than in Paris.

They were fortunate enough to be able to go to Italy. They didn't know at first if they would be able to because they would have to hire a busdriver and there had been some problems with French drivers crossing the border to Italy. Luckily they were able to get one, and went to Monaco.

One of Jeff's first impressions of Paris was that it was very dirty. There was a garbage collector strike at the time. Everyone in Paris seems to have a dog and they take them everywhere, restaurants included. So when walking along the street, you had to be careful where you stepped.

Jeff's group got lost on the Paris subway. "If you can survive the Paris subway you can survive anywhere!" Jeff said with a laugh.

One thing Jeff didn't like was that the trip was rushed. You'd get up in the morning and you went all day. "One thing we didn't like was that they thought we were Americans. Once we told them we were Canadians, they welcomed us more and almost bent over backwards to do anything for us," Jeff told me. "After reading about Paris, it was overwhelming to actually be there."

All in all it seemed like an interesting, educational and "let's not forget" enjoyable trip. Next year the French Club is thinking about going to Greece.

Last Friday, we spent one period watching a presentation from Much Music "The History of Rock". Through videos and songs, it expressed how music has changed from the golden oldies to today. We were able to cheer, clap or yell when a favourite song or artist came on. Everyone seemed to enjoy it.

Folksy images brought home by Harcourt artist

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A FARMER DRIVES HIS TRUCK across a green plain. Black-and-white Holsteins lumber into a barn. A grey, foreboding sky laden with dark clouds hangs low over a field of golden wheat sheaves.

These are just a sampling of the serene images present in the paintings of Harcourt artist Jerome

Coulas, who makes his local debut during a show starting this weekend.

Some call it folk art. But as one who dislikes labels, Coulas simply likes to think of his paintings as accessible. His art is familiar, safe and comforting.

"It has a broad appeal to those who don't have an academic understanding of art," he says.

The only training Coulas ever received was five lessons at $2 an hour from a nun when he was a Grade 9 student.

He is self-taught and credits this lack of formal training for his art's accessibility. Those who aren't familiar with works of a great variety of artists don't need such knowledge to appreciate Coulas's paintings. He doesn't know many of them either.

"Although I'm resistant to labels, I like the label 'naive' for my work because it reflects my lack of formal education in art," he explains. "To appreciate a lot of art, you need an academic background in fine art. Some art lacks something unless you understand where it's coming from. My artwork contrasts with that. It's for ordinary people."

Coulas hopes to meet such people when his show, Colours of Memories, Colours of Dreams, runs at the Rails' End Station Gallery from March 31 to April 28. He'll be at a public reception at the opening this Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m.

"This show is very exciting for me. It will be my introduction to the area as an artist, and I'm hoping it will be an informal gathering for the community."

Love at first visit

A Harcourt resident for the past year and a half, Coulas fell in love with the area years ago when he toured the province on motorcycle. "The scenery, and also the real estate prices, were right," he says.

In present works, Coulas celebrates his early years spent on a farm near Woodstock. A trademark heifer cow is often depicted in these paintings, which log his past and present life in the country.

Up until three years ago, Coulas had worked in social services with the Metropolitan Toronto Association for the Mentally Retarded. Although he has never studied art, Coulas holds a bachelor's degree in psychology from York University and has pursued studies in the humanities in Chicago and Boston.

The farm-boy turned city-slicker finally returned to the cool, clean air and safe streets by moving to Collingwood three years ago before eventually settling in Harcourt. He left his job behind to pursue a career in art.

"When the time came for my lifestyle to change from being a bureaucrat in social services, I felt I'd want to do something creative and expressive, like write a book. I'd done paintings all my life, and I had support from some gallery friends. I figured that was the route to take. Now, three and a half years later, that's what I'm still doing, and loving it."

As a teenager, Coulas would spend many weekends painting in his parents' rec. room. "I did some copying, like most do at first. Overall, the images were not dissimilar to now. I painted landscapes, farms and domestic animals."

For inspiration, Coulas drives around and takes photographs. However, "by and large, the images are imaginary, but familiar. Everyone can look at one of my paintings and say, 'Oh, I've been in a place like that before.' People identify with the images."

With his bold use of bright acrylics on canvas, Coulas' art seems a contradiction in terms. Vibrant colours bring serene images to life. The end result is at once optimistic and uplifting, while being reflective and contemplative.

"There is no political message," he says. "I think of the paintings as offerings. They are gifts in peace and tranquility."

Leaving the city behind

These feelings of solitude are easier to convey living away from the city. Coulas made some sacrifices in leaving. He sometimes misses having "an im-

They visited Universal Studios, and were in the audience of "The Price Is Right", a TV program many of you watch and CBS. They saw the clean-up crew working on the oil spill on Huntington Beach and found that most interesting. All in all, they had a good family holiday.

Betty Davey of Norland, Betty Moore and Marg Richard, son of Coby, Bun-ny Addison of Toronto, Betty Ann and Kim Howran of Peterborough and Margaret Brooks of Wilberforce enjoyed a ski holiday at Baldwins Resort at Windermere recently and had lots of snow to try their skills.

Don Timleck and son of Squamish BC have returned home after a holiday with his mother Amy Timleck, his sisters and cousins here. Aunts and old friends, Mrs. Orma Graham and her father, Jack Bradamore of Cant-bray, and Orma's daughter recently visited with Lila Bradamore.

The St. Patrick's "Pot Luck" supper preceded the card games, and a jelly bean guessing contest was won by Myra Dyon.

Sincere sympathy to the family of the late Bob Rumney, who passed away on March 19 after a gallant fight against cancer. Bob had surgery last fall and for a while, did quite well. However, he became more ill the last few weeks. The funeral was on Thursday.

Leo and Elly Hannivan are home after a holiday in Costa Rica, and report lovely hot weather and a super time.

Earl and Marion Godwin of Burnt River, recently enjoyed a holiday in Acapulco, having won the trip in a draw through the purchase of a ticket in a hockey draw. They had hot weather and after coming home for a break, were off again for another holiday, this time in Myrtle Beach. Lucky guys!

We enjoyed a hockey game between the Holiday Ford Petes and Guelph at the Kinsmen's Arena in Peterborough last Sunday.

It's Canadian Sport-sman's Show time in Toronto again and a lot of the business and sports en-thusiasts have visited the show there at the Exhibition grounds.

Buffet-style luncheon offers a delicious taste of China

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Tuesday morning the chapel service was taken by Pastor J. Fast. The Residents appreciate the service and thank him for coming.

Tuesday afternoon we had Hymn Sing with Marjorie Rennick playing the piano and leading the singing. We thank her very much for helping us enjoy the afternoon.

At noon Wednesday we had a real treat. Mark Schell and staff made delicious Chinese food for our lunch in the auditorium, buffet style. Everyone enjoyed it very much. Since I was away that day I missed the lunch and I hear I missed a delicious chicken dinner as well. Thank you Mark and everyone who made it possible to enjoy these dinners.

In the evening Earl Cooper and Kathy Owens came to give us a happy evening of music for which we thank them immensely.

Thursday afternoon the ladies from the Baptist Church in Haliburton brought the tea party which was delicious and everyone heartily enjoyed all the goodies and thank the ladies sincerely.

It was a happy day for Ruby Lewis since her daughter May Cooper and her two sister-in-laws, Marj and Ruth Bain from West Guilford, assisted the Haliburton ladies. May was there to help Ruby with her lunch so she enjoyed it more. Thanks girls.

Friday was Happy Hour in the afternoon and the entertainment was Jock Mavors and his Scottish Dancers. They were piped into the auditorium by our friend Earl Cooper. Earl also played his fiddle and some of us shook a leg to his music. Doris accompanied him on the piano. Since St. Patrick's day was Saturday the Scottish Dancers played a few Irish tunes. There was a great crowd of Residents and family members who helped to make the afternoon very special. This group will be back on April 20.

Thursday evening Jim Carrell came and called bingo for us. The time really flies and we thank Jim very much for a happy hour.

Sunday night's chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess with Alice Jones playing the organ. It was a very informative service. There was a good number out. The Residents' wheelchairs filled the space left by removal of one pew. It was so much better.

Alice Todd came home from her trip on Sunday.

Myrtle O'Halloran is back from St. Joseph's Hospital where she had treatment for a broken hip.

Grace Coburn had her daughter home on the weekend.

Pearl Lyle had her grandson Bob Lyle and family to see her Saturday.

Monday Evelyn Coleman was sick so was unable to have bible study. We hope she will soon be well again.

Monday night Ena and York Marion showed movies in the auditorium. They were "Northern Games", "Caterpillar" and "Mountain Park". It's so surprising to see how those people in the Northwest Territories can do so many different athletic acts and have so much strength and endurance. Thanks Ena and York.

From 2-4 p.m. Tuesday afternoon the Hyland Crest Auxiliary held its annual Card Party. Everyone was welcome and there were euchre, bridge and crockinole played with a lovely tea following. There were prizes for the high lady and high man as well as many door prizes. The charge was only $2.00. The auxiliary works very hard to raise funds to get things for our home. We thank them sincerely for their endeavors.

By the way, please remember our spring Flea Market in the front parking lot May 19, 10am to 5pm. We want what you don't.

To my prayer sister, thanks for the St. Patrick's gift. I love it.

Sylvia Howard came here for a couple of weeks to get back her strength so she could return to her apartment which she did Tuesday. We all wish her health and happiness there.

Those who have been sick and have now returned to the dining room for meals are Bob Mitchell, Lorne Fry, Ada Turrall, May Horsley, Gerty McKay, and Lula Ferrill. Welcome back and glad you are better.

Ada Lewis is still in Peterborough. We hope she will soon feel better.

Wednesday evening the Pentecostal Church from Allsaw held service in the main lounge. Harold Upton took the service and also sang. Pastor Murray was away for this service.

Two weeks ago I had my grandson Ricky and his friend Tim to visit me. Rick is an O.P.P. stationed at Sharbot Lake.

Artist finds richer life in Harcourt mediate network of friends for socializing, but I was born in the country and always wanted to return. Any sacrifices were small in comparison.

"Life is a lot richer here. It's rich in opportunity to enjoy the day to day life, and simple everyday going's on," he says. "And I couldn't own my own home in Toronto."

Coulas finds visits to Toronto to be a jarring experience. "It's strange to go back. I was in the city for a big show opening, and found the streets to be a little less pleasant to be on. There were areas of unease where I didn't feel safe. It's not peaceful. After living there for 13 years, I go to the city now, and I feel like a tourist."

During his city years, Coulas painted mainly as a hobby. The resulting artwork was primarily made up of graphic, geometric images.

"But always in my painting, the primary tool is colour," he says. "Another artist might have drawing and sketching abilities, but I think my greatest strength is colour and composition."

"I don't like to analyze it too much," he adds, smiling. "I just like to make an offering of the image to a viewer."

It's the ultimate gratification for an artist to know someone else appreciates his work. Art is a form of communication. When others are receptive, you know the message has come through.

"There's nothing like the feeling you get when someone walks out of a gallery with your painting under his arm," Coulas says. "It's very rewarding."

There is a give and take. He must depend on the sale of a painting for money, rather than a weekly pay cheque, and assures others that the cliché of the starving artist isn't dead.

"You just sit down and you paint—if you sit and wait for some profound inspiration, you starve. Sometimes it's mystery where the images come from, but they come..."

"I was extremely fortunate that my paintings began to sell almost immediately after I decided to paint. You have to sell to keep on painting."

He finds it's rather a storybook lifestyle. However, there are times Coulas is afraid it won't last.

"Because I don't have an academic background in fine art, I sometimes feel out of place in the art community, and I have some insecurity about that. The only way I judge my work is by measuring the reactions of other people. That's how I know where my strengths and weaknesses fall."

Art is like any other product, he says. "It's subject to all the rules and pressures of the market place. To survive, you need some sort of business sense, or good direction from someone with such sense."

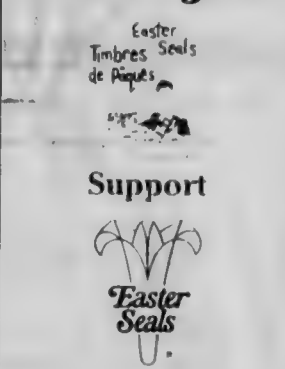

Coulas considers himself privileged to make a living out of painting. "It's a wonderful gift—in the sense of an opportunity—to be able to do this kind of creative work for a living and do it full-time. It's a very privileged situation to be in. I just hope it stays privileged."

During the warmer months, Coulas spends less time handling paintbrushes and more time digging with tools in the yard.

"I can paint whenever I feel like it, but as I rule of thumb I try to do a little every day. Some find it difficult being disciplined, but I'm able to keep at it."

"It doesn't feel like a sacrifice. Painting is a joy to me. It's the other chores in life that I have difficulty doing."

TONING TABLES...designed for SAFE, COMFORTABLE TONING & FLEXIBILITY
Lose Inches • Tone Up • Improve Your Self Image

OPEN:
Monday to Thursday 9:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.
Friday & Saturday 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

HERE ARE SOME COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT TONING

Q: How long will it take to see results?

A: Usually, inch loss is noticeable after a few sessions. As with all fitness programs, you'll see the best results with regular use over an extended period of time. Strength, flexibility, and muscle tone will increase progressively.

Q: Will I build muscle?

A: No. The high repetition movements of this type of exercise insure toned and firmed muscles without added bulk.

Q: Will the sessions help me diet?

A: Absolutely. As inches come off and muscles are toned, we find the resolve to change poor eating habits strengthens, increasing the success of the overall exercise program.

Q: Can I use the machines after pregnancy?

A: Of course. The program can greatly improve post-natal muscle tone. You should have your 6 week check up first.

Q: Does the system reduce cellulite?

A: Cellulite is a controversial subject. While not everyone agrees on its cause, many experts believe that increased circulation and improved muscle tone in problem areas significantly reduces cellulite. We agree, and so do a large number of women that have used our system.

Q: What is the difference between this type of exercise and aerobics?

A: An aerobic exercise is one which is performed for 12 to 15 minutes and increases heart rate to 60% to 90% of maximum. This increases cardiovascular endurance. The exercise system here is not aerobic exercise. It improves muscular endurance and tone as well as increasing flexibility.

Q: How does this compare to Nautilus-type exercise?

A: In general, Nautilus-type equipment works by providing resistance to the body's movements. The unique Slender Concept system uses the same principle, with one important difference. Our machines move your body while you provide the resistance. Our system's high-repetition movements result in muscles that are toned and firmed without the strain to the body and the added bulk that Nautilus-type equipment can cause.

Q: How can you guarantee inch loss?

A: Since our high repetition movements tone and firm muscles without adding bulk, as long as your weight remains the same or decreases, and you follow our exercise guidelines, inch loss will occur, it's as simple as that, and we guarantee it.

Q: Will elderly people benefit?

A: Yes. Our gentle way of moving the body is perfect for older people too, because everyone can work at their own level. The increased flexibility and range of motion which occurs with use of the system is great for those with stiff or arthritic joints.

FOREST FIRES BURN MORE THAN TREES...

During 1989, 50 forest fires occurred in the Haliburton and Minden areas. The months of April and May are the most dangerous time. Dead grass and leaves will allow a fire to spread very quickly, resulting in the potential loss of life, dwellings and forested land.

Before you burn your grass, brush or debris, remember these important points:

1. You must obtain a fire permit;
2. Ensure that a responsible person tends the fire;
3. Keep the fire under control;
4. Upon completion, put your fire DEAD OUT. Even if it appears out, stir it and drown it with water, again and again, until you're sure it is out.
5. No burning allowed between 10:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. (with the exception of industrial permits).

 FIRE PERMITS ARE FREE OF CHARGE.

During the fire season (April 1st to October 31st) the Forest Fires Prevention Act requires you to obtain a permit to be kept at the burning site and shown to an officer upon request. If you don't, you could be fined up to $1,000.00, imprisonment up to three months and liable for any costs and expenses involved in extinguishing a resulting fire.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Monmouth skaters take audience on Disney trip

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

A record crowd at the Wilberforce Arena on Saturday evening enjoyed a trip to Disney Land. The well-loved characters from the cartoon stories were recreated on ice by members of the Monmouth Figure Skating Club.

The skating area was nicely decorated with Disney posters and curtains provided an entrance way for the skaters. Harry Clark had a fine voice for introducing the entries. The opening number was by Renee Casey as Jiminy Cricket and this was followed by 101 Dalmations bringing on the young skaters in spotted costume.

It was the thrill of a lifetime for some of the little ones as they enjoyed the applause and did their best to put on a good show. Winning the hearts of everyone was a small boy who showed great perseverance and seemed unconcerned that he couldn't keep up with the rest.

Many entertaining acts followed with such characters as Cinderella, the Fairy Godmother, three little pigs, Peter Pan, etc.

There were guest skaters from Haliburton and Bancroft who showed talent and personality and delighted the crowd.

At half time a group of clowns hit the ice and were fun to watch. Their costumes were works of art and they tossed candy and gum to the youngsters in the stands.

Andrea Donaldson, skating teacher and her assistant Abby Burk showed their skating skill in a number The "A" Team.

Everyone seemed to have a great time and finale saw all of the Club members on the ice in Mickey Mouse attire.

Congratulations to the Monmouth Figure Skating Club for giving us such an evening of good entertainment.

An ever increasing curiosity about past history brings other people to this area every year as they delve into information about family members and early settlement. Our library supervisor Bessie

Croft received a telephone call from a Toronto resident who had discovered her family name in Monmouth Township book that a tourist had picked up while in Haliburton. She is a member of the Coukell family and was interested to learn that Henry Coukell was one of the six trustees for the early Methodist church in South Wilberforce. Henry had donated the piece of land on which the church was located and had also contributed a half acre for the school house. This has piqued the interest of the lady and she plans to visit and perhaps gather further items of interest.

Those who remember Mary Lee Dunford will be sorry to hear that she passed away in Lindsay on Saturday, March 24. Mary Lee was born in Manvers Township near Bethany. The family moved to Tory Hill in 1914. Mary married Bruce Dunford and they worked the farm now occupied by the Terrence Barclays. From here they moved to Dunsford and Mary later became a Lindsay resident. She was well loved by everyone who knew her for her cheerful disposition and kindly ways. She will be laid to rest in the South Wilberforce cemetery.

Kirk McMahon as Danny Kaye

Danny Kaye is brought to life

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

AT FIRST MENTION, Shaking Like a Leaf might attract those who want to be touched by the warm flush of nostalgia.

But with words and music whose intelligence transcends time, actor/singer/dancer Kirk McMahon knows his Danny Kaye revival is not just for the over-50 set.

For instance, there's the 10-minute song about the fiddle which falls in love with a trombone. The older audience picks up on the words and the music, "but a seven-year-old child just about pees his pants... because it's so physically outrageous."

Since opening in July of 1988, McMahon has noticed his tribute first attracts people who remember Kaye from their own youth. The next night, they bring their children. Then their children realize how much their children will enjoy the show. Like the musical itself, "it keeps moving on its own volition."

Much of the credit for this should go to Kaye's wife, Sylvia Fine. A silent partner as far as fame is concerned, Fine was responsible for writing the vast majority of the songs her husband spread to virtually every home in North America.

"She was amazing," McMahon says in a telephone interview. "The material 40 years later stands on its own."

The 90-minute show, which will be performed at the Haliburton Legion Sunday night at 7:30, follows the history of not only these songs, but the Kayes' relationship as well.

They were married in 1940 and stayed very much in love until 1947, when Kaye's star began to rise even though it was his wife's songs which helped him shine. In 1948, when he rocketed to international status with his Danny Kaye Show at the Paladium in London, England, the marriage broke down. They went their separate ways until Kaye realized he couldn't be happy without her music, and her companionship.

"You don't need to know that Tchaikovsky's Fifth Movement is playing in the background" to understand the humour of Danny Kaye's music.

"What his own heart was saying is that they should be together," McMahon says.

Kaye's talent was his ability to combine music with humour, thus appealing to two types of audiences. "You don't need to know Tchaikovsky's Fifth Movement is being played in the background" to understand the humour. That knowledge, however, enhances it.

McMahon's talent also goes beyond his physical resemblance to Kaye. The Toronto performer has been in every kind of theatre—except a one man show. In 1984, he was taking part in the Edinburgh Festival when he heard about Kaye's one-man show at the Paladium. Everything clicked.

For the next year, McMahon researched Kaye and Fine's musical and marriage partnership. By June of 1985, McMahon decided that if a one-man show of Kaye's work was to be a success, he would have to quit all other jobs and concentrate on perfecting his act.

When Kaye died in March, 1987, "that put everything into a big tizzy. The show was put on hold but fortunately things got worked out."

There's been no looking back since then. And the people of Haliburton only have an evening of pure entertainment to look forward to.

Legionnaires will miss comrade Earl Shipley

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

The death of comrade Earl Shipley, a great Legionnaire and a life member of Branch 129, has left all of us with a deep sense of loss. His life-long dedication to Legion and service to his community will always be fondly remembered. Our sympathy goes out to Jan and their daughters.

The spring Zone Convention was attended in Lindsay by Fred Knight, Ken Fieldhouse, Keith Brannigan, Sylvia Sisson and Mabel Brannigan.

Congratulations to all students who participated in the Branch public speaking contest. All contestants were most enjoyable to hear. On Sunday, Doreen Hawman, Mr. and Mrs. McKinlay and parents attended the Zone public speaking contest where three branch winners competed. Dawn Rowan and Charlene Simms were awarded second prize at Zone level, and Luke Barker's hilarious speech on "sewers" was received by the audience in the same warm way that it was in Haliburton.

Congratulations to Christopher Dair of 1129 Cadet Corps on the successful completion of his exams and for his award of the cadet gold star.

We are fortunate to have booked the popular show "Breath of Scotland" on April 30 at 8:00 p.m. This group will be on a two-week tour of Canada from Scotland at that time.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Special attention should be paid to tax changes

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT

from: BILL SCOTT
MP

DON'T FORGET to apply for the federal sales tax credit! Even if you did not earn enough money to pay taxes, you can still get a tax refund. To apply for the federal sales tax credit of $100 per adult and $50 per child, you must file a tax return.

You will get the full amount if your income is $16,000 or less. For each $100 of income above that level, the credit is reduced by $5.

Students aged 19 and over are eligible on their own, no matter how much money their parents make, and no matter whether they live at home or on their own.

This year's tax return includes an application for the new GST Credit, which will be paid four times a year, starting in December 1990.

The credit will be $190 a year for adults, and $100 for children. Single parents will be able to claim the adult credit for one of their children. Singles persons who maintain their own household, including single parents, will also be eligible for an additional credit of up to $100 a year. The credit will be reduced by $5 for every $100 of income over $24,800.

If you think you qualify, you should fill out the GST Credit application form to get your first cheque in December.

Some tax credits can be transferred if you cannot use them yourself. The age credit can be claimed by a spouse or other taxpayer who supports you. Up to $600 of tax credits for tuition and education expenses can be claimed by a spouse, parent or grandparent who supports you.

If you move more than 40 kilometres (25 miles) for a job or to go to school, keep a record of your expenses. You can claim some of those costs at tax time, including transportation and meals, the cost of selling your old home, legal fees for buying a new home, lease cancellation fees, temporary accommodation (e.g. motel) for up to 15 days, and storage.

Don't forget that the cost of your safety deposit box is deductible. Claim the amount as a carrying charge. Fees for the management or safe custody of investments are also deductible.

You are allowed to deduct legal expenses incurred to collect salary or wages. As a result of the April 1989 budget, expenses incurred to obtain a retiring allowance, severance pay, pension or wrongful dismissal award will also be deductible. This measure is retroactive to 1986.

It used to be that you had to be confined to a bed or wheelchair for most of the day to qualify for the disability deduction. In 1986, this was changed to include anyone who is restricted in daily living. Examples include profound deafness, mental retardation, mental illness, blindness and severe cardiorespiratory failure. The disability deduction is now a credit that cuts federal taxes by $573. The credit can be transferred to a supporting spouse, parent or grandparent if you cannot use it yourself. If you feel that you or someone you support may qualify, obtain a Disability Credit Certificate from Revenue Canada. This form must be completed by your doctor, and attached to your tax return. Beginning in 1989, the cost of part-time attendant care paid by the working disabled is tax-deductible.

The monthly payment for Canada Savings Bonds bought through payroll deductions includes an interest charge. That charge is deductible as a carrying charge. Claim the difference between what was deducted and the value of the bond. For example, if $1,048 was deducted to pay for a $1,000 bond, claim $48.

Japanese billet interesting guest

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Kay and Perry Morrison had the unique experience of billeting one of the Japanese girls, Mayumi Totsuka of Dr. R. Thomas' choir two weekends ago. Mayumi brought several brochures from Japan and one of her particular area: Gakuen. In one brochure is picture of Dr. Thomas instructing at the Kyoji Gakuen Women's Junior College. Mayumi demonstrated the art of origami (paper folding) to the Morrises. Her skills include cooking which was demonstrated when Mayumi cooked the hand-made noodles in the supper she made one evening.

Another facet of this visit of particular interest to me is that Dr. Thomas taught at the same school at Maple Lake as my mother, then Elsie Bigelow from Barrie. (Fate took a hand then in the person of Neilson Owens of Carnarvon area, and that's how it all began for my sisters and me!)

Bert Cowens had their grandchildren Valerie-Lynn and Alexander to visit from Orono. They are Jimmy and Allison Cowen's children.

On Saturday evening the donations for Red Cross came in just over $100. Thanks to all who contributed talent for the program: Stanhope Line Dancers under Dorothyjean Connors; Ian Craig, Earl Cooper and Ken Walsh in their informal band which accompanied the sing-along; Faith Aggett's Highland Dancers; Amy Rosenberg, Cheri Rivard, Dawn Moore, Brian Mansfield, and Sarah Levis. To Lou Vesh who received the donations and saw to receipts, and to Jean (Mrs. Richard) Henderson, and Anne Pollen who served refreshments many thanks as well. It was a good community effort. Stanhope Line Dancers may even have a few more as a result at their Thursday morning dance sessions.

"YOU PAY ONLY WHEN THE JOB GETS DONE!"

The sale of a home involves many specialists, primarily your REALTOR. And much of the selling process carries up-front costs, which are borne by the REALTOR. REALTORS work very hard for their fees. They get paid only when, or if, the house is sold. And because of this, you benefit not only from their expertise, but also from their desire to achieve the best for you from your most important asset: your home.

...and that can make a REAL difference!

REALTOR is a trademark which identifies real estate practitioners who are members of The Canadian Real Estate Association and as such adhere to a strict Code of Ethics.

Signs of spring reach Dorset

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

The first day of spring; and what was last week? Mid June? There was actually green grass showing where the snow had disappeared. Yes, we may still have an onslaught of snow but we can rub our hands together and say gleefully, IT WON'T LAST.

Happy birthday wishes to Kyla Woods on the 26th and to Zach Lock who will be 7 years old on the 27th. We send sincere get well wishes to Ed Bew who has been a patient at Huntsville Hospital for the past ten days.

I heart that the Racquet Ball court in the new Dorset Recreational Centre is being used quite extensively which is just great. The new Centre is such a complimentary addition to the community that it is gratifying to see it being made use of by the community in general.

It's nice to see familiar faces. Joan Robinson has been at the Dorset branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia for many years and has become a familiar and pleasant Monday morning custom. Last fall Joan decided to travel to Penticton, B.C. to stay with her daughter and take care of her three grandchildren. However, circumstances changed and she has returned to this part of the country.

ed to this part of the country. She is back at the bank, making all her old friends happy. Welcome back Joan.

We welcome back from Florida Lorraine and Bas Weatherell after they spent three months in Florida. They had their granddaughter, Kette, from Toronto visiting them during the Spring school break.

H.H. To make meringue so that it won't stick to the knife when cutting, add a half teaspoon of corn starch to the two egg whites. Something else that works, heat knife in warm water before cutting.

Beware of offers that sound too good

Residents in a number of areas of the province have recently been subjected to misleading or fraudulent telephone solicitations, and the Ontario Provincial Police would like to alert citizens to the common elements of many of these schemes.

Typically, these telephone solicitors advise people they have won a prize, or have an "opportunity" to do so. Usually there is some purchase to be made before the prize can be collected. The caller suggests that payment for the product or service being purchased be made by credit card, and asks for a credit card number. Once the number is given, the customer is immediately charged the agreed-upon amount.

"The majority of these types of telephone solicitations are designed to mislead potential customers—to make them believe they're going to get something at a much better price than anywhere else," said Insp. Ken Christopherson of the OPP's anti-rackets branch.

Minden WI plan for fall fair

The March meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the Common Room at 2 p.m. with the 1st Vice President, Mrs. Wm. Moore assisted by the 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Eldon Deacon, in charge. The roll call, name an Indian reserve and its location, was answered by 14 members and one guest was made welcome. The card report showed 10 cards sent out. A donation of $10 for this fund was received from Reg. Welch with appreciation. Collections for card fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken. The Women's Institute will enter an exhibit at the Minden fair. It was decided to have nominations from the floor for election of officers at the annual meeting on April 18. A bus trip to Cullen Gardens and other points of interest was planned for June 13.

The next meeting will be held in the Common Room on April 18 at 2 p.m. All ladies are welcome.

"The value of nature of the prize, or the requirements for claiming it, may be misrepresented," said Christopherson. "What you think you heard and what was actually said may be two different things, but even if what you heard was exactly what was said, it's difficult to prove misrepresentation."

A customer's first indication of a problem may be his or her credit card statement. Persons who believe they've purchased a bargain holiday from a so-called "travel agent", for example, may find their credit card statement indicates the money went to a restaurant, car rental agency or some other business. This is probably because the telephone solicitor has no arrangement with a credit card company, and is using an imprinting machine belonging to some other business to process orders.

"By the time you get your credit statement and realize something is wrong, it's too late," Christopherson said. "The money is gone."

These telephone scams usually involve no more than a few hundred dollars each, but throughout North America, it's estimated they bring in hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

"There are two key rules to remember when dealing with telephone solicitors," Christopherson said. "Never reveal your credit card number over the phone, and if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is."
